Farm Issue Test Is Top On Primary

Democrats Are Seeking Big Protest on Price Supports in South Dakota

(By The Associated Press)

A farm issue test in South Dakota, with Democrats striving to run up a big protest vote against Republican agricultural policies, provided the chief national interest of primary elections in three states today.

The other states involved in the voting were Nevada, featuring a five-man race for the Democratic nomination for governor, and Alabama where former Gov. James Folsom's victory in the first primary took most of the luster out of a Democratic runoff.

The only statewide Democratic contest in South Dakota was between E. F. McKellips, Alcester banker, and Ed C. Martin, Chandler rancher, for the gubernatorial nomination.

Have Accused GOP

Both of them have accused the GOP, in a wheat state where farm price supports are a hot issue, of backing "unsatisfactory farm legislation."

McKellips was favored, in a race which the Democrats hoped would bring out some 35,000 voters, about 15,000 more than two years ago.

The Republicans, with a three-way contest for governor, looked for about 100,000 votes.

Joe Foss, Sioux Falls auto dealer and medal of honor winner for shooting down 26 enemy planes in World War 2, was given an edge in the GOP contest against Lt. Gov. Rex Terry and Harold L. Lund, Brookings attorney.

A five-man race for the Democratic nomination for governor was the headline event in Nevada. The winner will try to unseat Gov. Charles Russell, unopposed on the Republican side.

Word Is Out

Backers of Archie Grant, Las Vegas auto dealer, have put out word that he is acceptable to veteran Sen. Pat McCarran (D.-Nev.).

The other contestants are Thomas Mechling, who won the Democratic senatorial nomination two years ago but lost in he general election when McCarran, despite the party difference, backed his Republican opponent, Sen. George Malone; Merrill Inch, former Reno newspaper and television executive; Vail Pittman, Ely publisher whom Russell turned out of the governorship two years ago; and Simon Conwell who runs in every election.

Former Rep. Walter Baring, who barely lost to Rep. Clifton Young in the general election two years ago, was opposed by Eugenia Clair Smith, Reno businesswoman, for the Democratic nomination for Nevada's one seat in the House of Representatives. Young was unopposed on the GOP side.

Alabama Voting

In Alabama the voters' job was to choose among Democratic candidates who failed to get an actual majority over the field in primaries four weeks ago. The Democratic nomination in Alabama amounts to election.

Folsom was already in without a runoff but he still was a figure in the second round, having endorsed a slate of candidates for state office.

There was one congressional contest—in the ninth Alabama district where Rep. Laurie Battle gave up his House seat to make an unsuccessful race against Sen. John Sparkman. The runoff candidates to succeed Battle were George Huddleston, Jr., son of a former congressman, and Arthur Allbright, former Birmingham postmaster.

523 Persons Killed In U.S. on Holiday; New York Toll 20

Previous Record of 510 Was in 1912; Traffic Takes at Least 355 Lives

(By The Associated Press)

Violent deaths over the three-day Memorial Day holiday period soared to a new record today.

At least 523 persons died in traffic accidents, drownings, and miscellaneous mishaps. This broke the previous record of 510 for a three-day Memorial Day holiday in 1952.

The traffic toll was at least 355, or 15 above the National Safety council's pre-holiday estimate of 340 and near the record 363 in 1952. An additional 92 lost their lives in drownings, and 76 in miscellaneous accidents.

The violent death total compared with 385 in the two-day holiday last year and the record Memorial Day total of 571 in a four-day period in 1950.

The nation's violent death toll over the extended Memorial Day holiday mounted past the 500 mark today.

Traffic accidents, as in other holidays, was the No. 1 killer. There was at least 345 persons killed in auto accidents from 6 p. m. Friday until midnight Monday.

The death toll on the highway was more than 100 above the number killed in auto mishaps over a comparative period of time two weeks earlier. And the highway death toll was higher than had been estimated by the National Safety Council in a pre-holiday statement. The council had estimated 340 traffic deaths.

In addition to traffic deaths, 86 persons lost their lives by drowning and 70 others were killed in accidents of miscellaneous causes.

Total 385 in 1953

The holiday violent death total of 501 compared to 385 in the two-day holiday last year and to the record Memorial Day death toll of 571 in a four-day period in 1950. This year's traffic toll was near the record of 363 in the three-day Memorial Day holiday of 1952.

An Associated Press survey of violent deaths was taken from 6 p. m. May 14 to midnight May 17. The same time span as the Memorial Day holiday, and showed a total of 243 traffic deaths, 50 drownings and 66 miscellaneous deaths for a total of 359.

States with the biggest death tolls during the holiday were California, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. California reported at least 37 traffic deaths.

Did Refer Ringler for Staff Probe

McCarthy Counsel Says He Never Said He'd 'Wreck Army' Over Schine Case

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Roy M. Cohn denied today he ever threatened to "wreck the army" and bring about the dismissal of Secretary Robert T. Stevens if Pvt. G. David Schine was sent overseas.

"Ridiculous and untrue," Cohn said of this earlier testimony by Army Counselor John G. Adams.

Cohn, 27-year-old chief counsel to the McCarthy subcommittee, denied too that he ever asked that Schine be assigned to the New York area—dispute testimony of both Adams and Stevens.

In the course of a hammering cross-examination from Special Counsel Ray H. Jenkins, Cohn disclosed he had referred the name of Schine's regimental commander at Ft. Dix to the McCarthy staff for investigation.

He swore this action as to Lt. Col. Earl L. Ringler was not related, however, to any concern over Schine's treatment at Dix.

He said he took the action because he had been told Ringler was not in sympathy with the McCarthy subcommittee's work and had referred to it as "a witch hunt" and a "red herring."

Cohn's order for a check on Ringler was brought out during questioning of the McCarthy aide about an assertion from any Army witness that Cohn once said Ringler and Capt. Joseph Miller had been uncooperative where Schine was concerned and that he (Cohn) would not forget their names.

Came from Blount

That testimony came from Lt. John Bruce Blount who said Cohn made the statement in objecting to a Sunday kitchen police assignment for Schine.

A little later Jenkins recalled testimony from Adams as to Cohn's reaction when informed Schine might be sent overseas.

Adams said Cohn threatened to wreck the Army and declared Stevens would be "through as secretary of the army."

"I'm sure I did not make that statement," Cohn testified under oath, as had Adams.

Both statements attributed to him, Cohn said, are "ridiculous and untrue."

Further, Cohn added, "Mr. Adams or anybody else with any sense—and Mr. Adams has a lot of sense—" would not believe he threatened the Army.

Checked With Carr

Cohn said he had checked the matter with Francis P. Carr, who also was present during the conversation between Adams and Schine, and Carr likewise does not recall Cohn making any such statements.

Carr is chief of staff of the McCarthy subcommittee. Charges against Carr have been dismissed, but he still will be heard as a witness.

Adam's testimony had been that Cohn flew into a violent rage and made the threats when told that Shcine, wealthy young New Yorker and former McCarthy subcommittee consultant, might have to go overseas like nine out of ten other soldiers.

Cohn, who has acknowledged trying to get a direct commission as an officer for Schine, testified he felt it was "injustice" to Schine for the army not to give him a commission.

Reber Is Ousted

When the matter of a commission for Schine first came up, Cohn said, Maj. Gen. Miles Reber said there was "no doubt" of Schine's qualifications.

Later, Cohn said, Adams told him the reason Schine never got a commission was because of his connection with the McCarthy subcommittee.

At the time the question of a commission arose last year, Reber

Taipeh, Formosa, June 1 (AP)—Nationalist China's Defense Ministry said today the mutilated bodies of 52 persons, all of them lashed with wire to boards, have been pulled from the sea off the China coast in the past five years. A steady flow of traffic moved through Kingston during the Memorial Day weekend, reaching a peak yesterday afternoon and evening as cars returned to metropolitan areas, but the city had no serious accidents.

Two persons were treated for minor injuries—one as the result of a three-car collision Monday morning on the Rondout creek bridge, the other an accident in which a pedestrian was allegedly knocked to the pavement.

Grandma Upset

All in All, Patrick Had One Heck of an Auto Ride

Wichita, Kan., June 1 (AP)—Francis Greenfield gasped when a car went around him traveling 75 miles per hour near here today. Perched precariously on the rear bumper was a 3-year-old tot holding a large cowboy hat.

Tramping his accelerator to the floorboard, Greenfield overtook the speeding auto and flagged it to a stop.

"What do you want?" the woman driver asked.

"Do you know there's a little boy on your back bumper?"

"A little...."

The woman stepped to the back of the car, cried, "Patrick, what are you doing here," and almost became hysterical.

Greenfield said he learned that the driver was the tot's grandmother en route to her home in California after visiting Patrick and his parents here.

He did not learn the identity of the grandmother or the boy.

Fairbanks, Alaska, June 1 (AP)—A Brooklyn soldier injured May 16 in a fall on towering Mt. McKinley was evacuated by air force helicopter early today and flown here for hospitalization.

Doctors said the soldier, Pfc. George Argus, whose hip was broken in a 1,000-foot fall that killed a companion, was alive but unconscious when lifted from the mountain by a helicopter pilot who "squeezed every inch out of the altimeter" to reach him on the ice of Muldrow Glacier.

He was reached at about the 6,500-foot level of the 20,690-foot peak, the tallest in North America.

Central Control Still in Doubt

New Recess Today Boosts Indications Fight Is Very Close

Albany, June 1 (AP)—The outcome of the struggle for control of the far-flung New York Central Railroad system remained in doubt today and, as a result, the annual meeting of the stockholders was recessed again—until noon next Tuesday.

The new recess came amid increasing indications that the fight was close.

The additional week's extension was requested by the inspectors of election, who said in a report to Central President William White:

"We regret to report that the counting and tabulation of the vote is incomplete. The existence of the contest, the size of the vote, the number of proxy papers and supporting documents, and the checking of papers by representatives of the two sides, made difficult the expedition of the count."

The meeting had been in recess since late last Wednesday, when 2,000 stockholders participated in a tumultous gathering. Since Wednesday, the election inspectors, three law professors, have been counting the votes.

Robert R. Young, who is leading the forces seeking to oust the present management of the Central, was not present.

After the meeting newsmen asked White whether he would stand on his statements made prior to last Wednesday's meeting that he was confident of victory and he replied: "I see no reason to change that."

Meanwhile, the count of ballots and proxies continued under guard in an Albany hotel, and credible reports were gaining circulation that the result would not be one-sided.

Heroine Goes Home

Paris, June 1 (AP)—Lt. Genevieve De Galard Terraube, the heroine of Dien Bien Phu, returned smiling today to her native France.

Taipeh, Formosa, June 1 (AP)—A Chinese Nationalist news agency said today. Communist Vietminh forces in Indochina will have a Russian-equipped air force by the end of this year. President Deplores Division On How to Hit Communism

New York, June 1 (AP)—President Eisenhower last night deplored division within America on how to fight communism. He called for "more knowledge and intellect and less prejudice and passion."

A "crusade of truth" is needed both at home and abroad, he told a dinner highlighting the 200th anniversary of the founding of Columbia University.

"Through knowledge and understanding," he said, "we will drive from the temple of freedom all who seek to establish over us thought control—whether they be agents of a foreign state or demagogues thirsty for personal power and public notice."

The President mentioned no names in denouncing "would-be censors and regulators" and those who "divert our attention from the main battle" in opposing communism — an over-all goal on which he said Americans are united above all others.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty was asked whether the President had referred in the speech to Sen. Jo-

Unlimited Thruway Use To Be Allowed for $20 Fee

Albany, June 1 (AP)—Unlimited use of most of the cross-state thruway—whose total cost now is estimated at 962 million dollars—will be available to New York state motorists for $20 a year.

Announcing toll schedules for the New York-Buffalo expressway Saturday, the State Thruway Authority said it planned to sell $20 annual permits for use of the road to passenger cars registered in the state.

The authority said it would cost motorists who did not hold such permits $5.60 to make the trip of more than 400 miles from New York city to Buffalo.

In another report the authority placed the overall cost of the super-highway at 962 million dollars—nearly twice as much as estimated when the highway was planned.

Bertram D. Tallamy, authority chairman, said yesterday that he believed the thruway was a "bargain" and that its cost was "entirely reasonable" compared with the costs of similar projects in other states.

No Serious Crashes Mark Weekend

Three-Car Smashup Occurs on Bridge at Rondout —Girl Is Struck

A steady flow of traffic moved through Kingston during the Memorial Day weekend, reaching a peak yesterday afternoon and evening as cars returned to metropolitan areas, but the city had no serious accidents.

Two persons were treated for minor injuries—one as the result of a three-car collision Monday morning on the Rondout creek bridge, the other an accident in which a pedestrian was allegedly knocked to the pavement.

Grandma Upset

All in All, Patrick Had One Heck of an Auto Ride

Wichita, Kan., June 1 (AP)—Francis Greenfield gasped when a car went around him traveling 75 miles per hour near here today. Perched precariously on the rear bumper was a 3-year-old tot holding a large cowboy hat.

Tramping his accelerator to the floorboard, Greenfield overtook the speeding auto and flagged it to a stop.

"What do you want?" the woman driver asked.

"Do you know there's a little boy on your back bumper?"

"A little...."

The woman stepped to the back of the car, cried, "Patrick, what are you doing here," and almost became hysterical.

Greenfield said he learned that the driver was the tot's grandmother en route to her home in California after visiting Patrick and his parents here.

He did not learn the identity of the grandmother or the boy.

Soldier Is Removed From Mt. McKinley

'Copter, Plane Take Argus to Fairbanks Hospital for Treatment

Fairbanks, Alaska, June 1 (AP)—A Brooklyn soldier injured May 16 in a fall on towering Mt. McKinley was evacuated by air force helicopter early today and flown here for hospitalization.

Doctors said the soldier, Pfc. George Argus, whose hip was broken in a 1,000-foot fall that killed a companion, was alive but unconscious when lifted from the mountain by a helicopter pilot who "squeezed every inch out of the altimeter" to reach him on the ice of Muldrow Glacier.

He was reached at about the 6,500-foot level of the 20,690-foot peak, the tallest in North America.

Argus was flown in the helicop-

Central Control Still in Doubt

New Recess Today Boosts Indications Fight Is Very Close

Albany, June 1 (AP)—The outcome of the struggle for control of the far-flung New York Central Railroad system remained in doubt today and, as a result, the annual meeting of the stockholders was recessed again—until noon next Tuesday.

The new recess came amid increasing indications that the fight was close.

The additional week's extension was requested by the inspectors of election, who said in a report to Central President William White:

"We regret to report that the counting and tabulation of the vote is incomplete. The existence of the contest, the size of the vote, the number of proxy papers and supporting documents, and the checking of papers by representatives of the two sides, made difficult the expedition of the count."

The meeting had been in recess since late last Wednesday, when 2,000 stockholders participated in a tumultous gathering. Since Wednesday, the election inspectors, three law professors, have been counting the votes.

Robert R. Young, who is leading the forces seeking to oust the present management of the Central, was not present.

After the meeting newsmen asked White whether he would stand on his statements made prior to last Wednesday's meeting that he was confident of victory and he replied: "I see no reason to change that."

Meanwhile, the count of ballots and proxies continued under guard in an Albany hotel, and credible reports were gaining circulation that the result would not be one-sided.

President Deplores Division On How to Hit Communism

New York, June 1 (AP)—President Eisenhower last night deplored division within America on how to fight communism. He called for "more knowledge and intellect and less prejudice and passion."

A "crusade of truth" is needed both at home and abroad, he told a dinner highlighting the 200th anniversary of the founding of Columbia University.

"Through knowledge and understanding," he said, "we will drive from the temple of freedom all who seek to establish over us thought control—whether they be agents of a foreign state or demagogues thirsty for personal power and public notice."

The President mentioned no names in denouncing "would-be censors and regulators" and those who "divert our attention from the main battle" in opposing communism — an over-all goal on which he said Americans are united above all others.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty was asked whether the President had referred in the speech to Sen. Jo-

Unlimited Thruway Use To Be Allowed for $20 Fee

Albany, June 1 (AP)—Unlimited use of most of the cross-state thruway—whose total cost now is estimated at 962 million dollars—will be available to New York state motorists for $20 a year.

Announcing toll schedules for the New York-Buffalo expressway Saturday, the State Thruway Authority said it planned to sell $20 annual permits for use of the road to passenger cars registered in the state.

The authority said it would cost motorists who did not hold such permits $5.60 to make the trip of more than 400 miles from New York city to Buffalo.

In another report the authority placed the overall cost of the super-highway at 962 million dollars—nearly twice as much as estimated when the highway was planned.

Bertram D. Tallamy, authority chairman, said yesterday that he believed the thruway was a "bargain" and that its cost was "entirely reasonable" compared with the costs of similar projects in other states.

Gives Two Reasons For Green Diamonds

Can it be they're putting chlorophyll in diamonds now? Sign says so, right in Schneider's window on Wall street, or does it? Nope, on second glance, it says, "Green Diamonds, subjected to Cyclotron Treatment." Cyclotron—rays of the atom.

Now why would anyone want to make a nice, pure, white diamond green? Article here says they've been trying to do this since back in 1904 when Sir William Crookes exposed diamonds to direct radiation of a radium compound and obtained a bluish-green color. Gilding the lily, maybe?

Not so, says George Schneider. There are two very good reasons for making green diamonds, Schneider points out: (1) Many people like green stones, but there is no green stone on the market that is durable. Stones naturally green are soft, and may not stand up under hard usage that some people partial to green may want to give them. In addition, the emerald, best known of the green stones, is "fabulously expensive" at the present time. Diamonds, more reasonably priced, are noted for their durability. (2) The beautiful, fine, pure, white diamonds are not given the chlorophyll—oops, cyclotron—treatment. The ones that are treated are the slightly off-color diamonds with yellowish or brownish tinge that do not find ready markets in their natural state.

The green diamonds, first that Schneider has been able to obtain, will remain on display at Schneider's, jewelers, 290 Wall street, the rest of the week.

Late Bulletin

Indianapolis, June 1 (AP)—An all-night check of the electric timing tape showed officially today that the first five finishers broke the old track speed record for the 500-mile auto race. Bill Vukovich set the new record at 130.840 miles an hour as he won for a second straight year yesterday.

There were no changes in the unofficial list of the first 10, but Lee Elkins of Kalamazoo, Mich., protested that his driver, Mike Nazaruk, North Bellmore, N. Y., should be fourth, instead of fifth.

As announced this morning, Nazaruk's speed was 128.923 miles an hour, just over Troy Ruttman's 1952 winning average of 128.922.

Ruttman, relieved by Duane Carter of Speedway City, Ind., was listed fourth at 129.218.

Elkins contended Ruttman's car never passed his on the track, spent 33 seconds more in the pits and was further delayed by a spin.

Eleven cars went the full 200 laps. Seven others were still running at the finish, but were flagged off the track because the crowd was getting in the way.

Expresses Thanks To Local People In Restoring Bell

Hoboken, N. J., June 1 (AP)—A Dutch chaplain today expressed his congregation's thanks to the people of Kingston, N. Y., for their help in restoring his church's ancient bell to its tower after World War 2.

The Rev. Arthur C. Austin, who arrived on the Holland-America liner Westerdam, said he hopes to be able to express his thanks personally.

The chaplain is here as an exchange pastor. He will serve at St. Savior's Church, Raleigh, N. C., while the Carolina church's regular pastor, the Rev. William P. Katt, goes to the Rev. Mr. Austin's Anglo-American church in the Hague.

The Dutch Church is claimed to be the oldest of English establishments in Holland, dating back to 1595.

Its bell dates from 1691. Taken by Napoleon's troops in 1813, it was recovered, taken again by the Nazis and finally found in a lake in 1947.

Correspondence between the warden of his own church and the warden of a church in Kingston resulting in $800 being raised in Kingston to restore the bell, the Rev. Mr. Austin said.

Sheriff's Aides Check Dispute at Oliverea

The sheriff's office was notified at 10:45 p. m. Monday that a stabbing had taken place at Oliverea and there was a possibility that it might be followed by a shooting. Under Sheriff Clayton W. Vredenburg, County Investigator Arthur A. Brown, County Identification Officer Earl Conro, deputy sheriffs local constables and state police converged on the scene.

It developed that a dispute had arisen between two Oliverea summer residents over the bounds of their places. Paul Westhouser of Fort Lee, N. J. was arrested on a third degree assault charge on complaint of Willy Seidel of New Rochelle. Westhouser was held in $50 bail for a hearing on June 7 before Justice William P. Malloy. The stabbing apparently was reported when it is alleged Seidel tripped over a barbed-wire fence.

Soldier Is Removed

ter to Kantishma, a small mining community at the foot of the mountain, where he was placed in a small air force plane and taken to Minchumina. A two-engine plane met the party there to fly him to Fairbanks.

To Evacuate Others

The helicopter, piloted by Capt. Ralph Searle of the 74th rescue squdron, returned to the mountain to begin evacuation of eight members of the rescue party who brought him down the ice-covered mountain.

Argus' hip was broken when he and three companions tumbled down the treacherous mountain slope while attempting a climb May 16. George Thayer, 27, of Reedsboro, Vt., was killed but the others, Morton Wood and Les Viereck, escaped without serious injury.

Wood and Viereck left Argus in an improvised tent May 23 and worked their way down the mountain to report the accident.

Led Rescue Party

Dr. John McCall, a University of Alaska geologist, and Frank Milan of the air force aero-medical laboratory at Ladd Air Force Base, led the rescue party that reached Argus early Sunday.

The rescuers were described as completely exhausted by their ordeal. Because of his injury, Argus was strapped to a sled and members of the rescue party took turns lifting him over dangerous crevasses.

A doctor flew overhead in an air force plane giving medical advice by radio as the party made its way to the point where the helicopter was able to make contact.

The daring helicopter rescue was affected in the Arctic twilight of an Alaska summer. While the air force said helicopters normally do not function properly above 5,000 feet, Searles said he "squeezed every inch out of the altimeter" and managed to reach Argus and the rescue party on the glacier.

Threat to Army

was army liaison officer with Congress. Reber, Stevens and Adams all have testified they examined every possibility of a commission for Schine in the army, navy and air corps, and that the findings was that he was not qualified.

Cohn brought to the hearing room a big cardboard box filled with documents to back up his contention that Schine did a lot of work for the McCarthy subcommittee, both before and after his induction into the army.

Raised by Senators

The question raised by senators is whether Schine actually did subcommittee work on occasions when he was given passes from Dix on the representation he was needed for subcommittee business.

The documents Cohn produced were not immediately examined or put into the record.

Cohn has said Schine, after entering the army, helped prepare three interim committee reports on the U. S. information service, including the Voice of America, and helped draft the committee's annual report.

Furthermore, Cohn said, Schine gave to staff members much information on such things as the evaluation of statements he had obtained from witnesses he had interviewed.

Cohn said that some of the documents in his cardboard box contain the names of informants.

Chairman Mundt (R-S. D.) said that the names will have to be screened out before the documents can go into the record.

Army Counsel Joseph N. Welch said all he was interested in was the end product of Schine's work after he went into the army.

Cohn said there might be some information Welch did not want to see, such as information on the investigation of Communist infiltration of the army.

Mundt said the subcommittee itself will decide what documents shall be put into the record.

Jenkins recalled to Cohn that Adams had testified that from Nov. 18 to Dec. 8 Cohn repeatedly exerted pressure to get Schine, who had been drafted Nov. 3, assigned to the New York area.

Gives Two Reasons For Green Diamonds

Can it be they're putting chlorophyll in diamonds now? Sign says so, right in Schneider's window on Wall street, or does it? Nope, on second glance, it says, "Green Diamonds, subjected to Cyclotron Treatment." Cyclotron—rays of the atom.

Now why would anyone want to make a nice, pure, white diamond green? Article here says they've been trying to do this since back in 1904 when Sir William Crookes exposed diamonds to direct radiation of a radium compound and obtained a bluish-green color. Gilding the lily, maybe?

Not so, says George Schneider. There are two very good reasons for making green diamonds, Schneider points out: (1) Many people like green stones, but there is no green stone on the market that is durable. Stones naturally green are soft, and may not stand up under hard usage that some people partial to green may want to give them. In addition, the emerald, best known of the green stones, is "fabulously expensive" at the present time. Diamonds, more reasonably priced, are noted for their durability. (2) The beautiful, fine, pure, white diamonds are not given the chlorophyll—oops, cyclotron—treatment. The ones that are treated are the slightly off-color diamonds with yellowish or brownish tinge that do not find ready markets in their natural state.

The green diamonds, first that Schneider has been able to obtain, will remain on display at Schneider's, jewelers, 290 Wall street, the rest of the week.

Lava Is Thrown Out

Honolulu, June 1 (AP)—Hawaii's huge Kilauea crater spewed an estimated 10 million cubic yards of fiery lava into the air in its most spectacular eruption of the century yesterday, and thousands of sightseers flocked to watch the show. An estimated 10,000 came by plane, car and foot, loaded down with cameras and picnic lunches to watch the islands' drive-in volcano in action.

Mansfield Is Renamed

Rochester, June 1 (AP)—Denis A. Mansfield of Saratoga Springs has been reelected state deputy of the New York State Council of the Knights of Columbus. Other officers reelected Saturday at the Council's 59th annual convention were John F. Symonds, New York, secretary; James G. Cunningham, Springfield Gardens, treasurer; Roland A. Crowe, Glen Cove, advocate; and Joseph V. Colaio, New York, Warden.

Late Bulletin

Indianapolis, June 1 (AP)—An all-night check of the electric timing tape showed officially today that the first five finishers broke the old track speed record for the 500-mile auto race. Bill Vukovich set the new record at 130.840 miles an hour as he won for a second straight year yesterday.

There were no changes in the unofficial list of the first 10, but Lee Elkins of Kalamazoo, Mich., protested that his driver, Mike Nazaruk, North Bellmore, N. Y., should be fourth, instead of fifth.

As announced this morning, Nazaruk's speed was 128.923 miles an hour, just over Troy Ruttman's 1952 winning average of 128.922.

Ruttman, relieved by Duane Carter of Speedway City, Ind., was listed fourth at 129.218.

Elkins contended Ruttman's car never passed his on the track, spent 33 seconds more in the pits and was further delayed by a spin.

Eleven cars went the full 200 laps. Seven others were still running at the finish, but were flagged off the track because the crowd was getting in the way.

Expresses Thanks To Local People In Restoring Bell

Hoboken, N. J., June 1 (AP)—A Dutch chaplain today expressed his congregation's thanks to the people of Kingston, N. Y., for their help in restoring his church's ancient bell to its tower after World War 2.

The Rev. Arthur C. Austin, who arrived on the Holland-America liner Westerdam, said he hopes to be able to express his thanks personally.

The chaplain is here as an exchange pastor. He will serve at St. Savior's Church, Raleigh, N. C., while the Carolina church's regular pastor, the Rev. William P. Katt, goes to the Rev. Mr. Austin's Anglo-American church in the Hague.

The Dutch Church is claimed to be the oldest of English establishments in Holland, dating back to 1595.

Its bell dates from 1691. Taken by Napoleon's troops in 1813, it was recovered, taken again by the Nazis and finally found in a lake in 1947.

Correspondence between the warden of his own church and the warden of a church in Kingston resulting in $800 being raised in Kingston to restore the bell, the Rev. Mr. Austin said.

Sheriff's Aides Check Dispute at Oliverea

The sheriff's office was notified at 10:45 p. m. Monday that a stabbing had taken place at Oliverea and there was a possibility that it might be followed by a shooting. Under Sheriff Clayton W. Vredenburg, County Investigator Arthur A. Brown, County Identification Officer Earl Conro, deputy sheriffs local constables and state police converged on the scene.

It developed that a dispute had arisen between two Oliverea summer residents over the bounds of their places. Paul Westhouser of Fort Lee, N. J. was arrested on a third degree assault charge on complaint of Willy Seidel of New Rochelle. Westhouser was held in $50 bail for a hearing on June 7 before Justice William P. Malloy. The stabbing apparently was reported when it is alleged Seidel tripped over a barbed-wire fence.

Soldier Is Removed

ter to Kantishma, a small mining community at the foot of the mountain, where he was placed in a small air force plane and taken to Minchumina. A two-engine plane met the party there to fly him to Fairbanks.

To Evacuate Others

The helicopter, piloted by Capt. Ralph Searle of the 74th rescue squdron, returned to the mountain to begin evacuation of eight members of the rescue party who brought him down the ice-covered mountain.

Argus' hip was broken when he and three companions tumbled down the treacherous mountain slope while attempting a climb May 16. George Thayer, 27, of Reedsboro, Vt., was killed but the others, Morton Wood and Les Viereck, escaped without serious injury.

Wood and Viereck left Argus in an improvised tent May 23 and worked their way down the mountain to report the accident.

Led Rescue Party

Dr. John McCall, a University of Alaska geologist, and Frank Milan of the air force aero-medical laboratory at Ladd Air Force Base, led the rescue party that reached Argus early Sunday.

The rescuers were described as completely exhausted by their ordeal. Because of his injury, Argus was strapped to a sled and members of the rescue party took turns lifting him over dangerous crevasses.

A doctor flew overhead in an air force plane giving medical advice by radio as the party made its way to the point where the helicopter was able to make contact.

The daring helicopter rescue was affected in the Arctic twilight of an Alaska summer. While the air force said helicopters normally do not function properly above 5,000 feet, Searles said he "squeezed every inch out of the altimeter" and managed to reach Argus and the rescue party on the glacier.

Files Are Refused

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Sen. McCarthy today blocked senators investigating his row with the army from getting files on work done by G. David Schine until names of informants have been deleted from them. His stand touched off another angry exchange during which Sen. McClellan (D.-Ark.) accused McCarthy of being "unfair" and demanded that the Eisenhower administration make known its position on "pilfered" classified information.

Threat to Army

was army liaison officer with Congress. Reber, Stevens and Adams all have testified they examined every possibility of a commission for Schine in the army, navy and air corps, and that the findings was that he was not qualified.

Cohn brought to the hearing room a big cardboard box filled with documents to back up his contention that Schine did a lot of work for the McCarthy subcommittee, both before and after his induction into the army.

Raised by Senators

The question raised by senators is whether Schine actually did subcommittee work on occasions when he was given passes from Dix on the representation he was needed for subcommittee business.

The documents Cohn produced were not immediately examined or put into the record.

Cohn has said Schine, after entering the army, helped prepare three interim committee reports on the U. S. information service, including the Voice of America, and helped draft the committee's annual report.

Furthermore, Cohn said, Schine gave to staff members much information on such things as the evaluation of statements he had obtained from witnesses he had interviewed.

Cohn said that some of the documents in his cardboard box contain the names of informants.

Chairman Mundt (R-S. D.) said that the names will have to be screened out before the documents can go into the record.

Army Counsel Joseph N. Welch said all he was interested in was the end product of Schine's work after he went into the army.

Cohn said there might be some information Welch did not want to see, such as information on the investigation of Communist infiltration of the army.

Mundt said the subcommittee itself will decide what documents shall be put into the record.

Jenkins recalled to Cohn that Adams had testified that from Nov. 18 to Dec. 8 Cohn repeatedly exerted pressure to get Schine, who had been drafted Nov. 3, assigned to the New York area.

500-million-dollar bond issue to finance construction of the thruway. Tallamy said estimates that led to that request were based on the costs of superhighways in other states and on preliminary construction on the thruway in New York.

Tallamy said that rising costs were the main reason for the new overall figure.

The 962 million includes 58 million dolars to be contributed by the federal government for toll-free sections of the expressway and $81,000,134, advanced by the state for initial expenditures.

Tallamy said the toll schedule had been set "to assure that there will be ample revenues" to retire bond issues for thruway construction.

The $20 permit will entitle a holder to unlimited travel west of Spring Valley and on the Berkshire spur. Thus a motorist holding a permit may drive between New York and Buffalo for 60 cents—a 10-cent charge at the Yonkers barrier and a 50-cent toll over the Tarrytown-Nyack bridge.

The $5.60 fee, which averages about 1¼ cents a mile, would get a driver only to the edge of Buffalo. There will be two toll stations on the Niagara section in Buffalo and at two bridges to Grand Island.

There will be two similar charges in the New York metropolitan area and on the Berksire section, and a minimum of 25 cents will be charged at a bridge that is to be built across the Hudson about 10 miles south of Albany. The bridge will connect the main thruway with the Berkshire spur.

Commercial vehicles — except light four-wheeled trucks — will pay higher fees, scaled according to the type of vehicle, the authority said.

The authority plans also to issue a reduced-rate annual permit for use on those parts of the expressway to be opened to toll traffic this year. That permit will be valid until Dec. 31.

117-mile leg of the Thruway, between Lowell, Oneida county, and West Henrietta, south of Rochester, will be opened to toll traffic June 24.

L. Judson Morhouse, general chairman of the celebration planned for the event, appointed eight leaders of the automobile and tire industry Saturday to serve on an honorary committee. They will assist Chairman Alfred P. Sloan, board chairman of General Motors Corp., who had been named previously.

They are:

Paul G. Hoffman, chairman of the board, Studebaker Corp.; Harvey S. Firestone Jr., board chairman, Firestone Tire and Rubber Co.; E. D. Bransome, president, Mack Motor Truck Corp.; Ernest R. Breech, executive vice president, Ford Motor Co.; L. L. Colbert, president, Chrysler Corp.; George W. Mason, president, Automobile Manufacturers Asso., and James J. Nance, president, Packard Motor Car Co.

City Firemen Respond Twice During Weekend

Firemen answered two calls during the Memorial Day weekend, one for an oil burner out of adjustment, the other for a chimney fire.

Engine 1 and Truck 1 from Central Station, Engine 2 from Cornell and equipment from Rapid Hose were dispatched to 47 Hudson street at 5:04 Sunday for the oil burner call. The burner was located in the first-floor apartment of Fred Schiskey.

The chimney fire was at 20 Navara street. Engine 3 from Wiltwyck Station responded at 5:41 p. m. Monday.

No Serious Crashes

fic slowed on the bridge, Roberta Cone, 15, of 215-14 Murdock avenue, Queens Village, L. I., a passenger in the second of the three cars, was taken to Kingston Hospital by Edward Caughey of 74 Hunter street, treated and released, police reported.

According to police, the accident resulted when a 1951 sedan operated by Robert A. Todd, RD 4, Newburgh, stopped for traffic. The car behind the Todd vehicle, a 1952 passenger automobile, operated by Francis McKeon, 18, of 218-69 99th avenue, Queens Village, also stopped.

Police said a third car, a 1951 passenger vehicle, operated by Paul A. Johnson of 85 Merlin avenue, North Tarrytown, struck the rear of the McKeon car and drove it into the Todd vehicle.

The McKeon car was heavily damaged in front and rear and had to be towed away. The Johnson vehicle was damaged in the right front fender, bumper, radiator and hood.

Pedestrian Accident

Mrs. Elizabeth Rinaldo of 22 Lawrenceville street, town of Ulster, reported to police headquarters at 7:20 p. m. Saturday that about noon that day she and Betty Riely, 16, of 52 Grant street, were waiting for a red light to change at the intersection of Broadway and Pine Grove avenue before crossing Broadway.

She said traffic was backed up and at a standstill and that an unknown driver of a milk tanker motioned for them to cross. Upon moving out into the street and past the tanker, however, Miss Riely was knocked to the pavement, she said, by a car operated by George DeCicco of Flatbush road. A shoe was reported knocked from her foot by the impact.

Miss Riely was taken to a private physician by DeCicco, where she was treated for injuries to her right leg near the knee, it was reported.

State Police Reports

State Police in the Kingston area report exceptionally heavy traffic over the Memorial Day week end but no serious traffic accidents. There were several minor accidents and a few traffic violations but for the most part traffic moved with little delay.

Main highways were kept "fairly free" of traffic tie ups and even during the return rush on Monday traffic flowed "smoothly" one Trooper reported. Main highways were patroled and for the most part drivers observed speed and traffic regulations, it was reported.

Car Rolls Over

A Ford car of Lester Ostoyice of Malden was badly damaged Monday when the operator lost control and the car rolled over at the Saugerties entrance to the Thruway. State police from the Kingston station reported no one injured in the accident which happened Monday evening.

Maria Van Schilling of Mt. Pleasant excaped serious injury Saturday when she lost control of the car she was operating on the Onteora Trail near the Travelers Rest. She was taken to the Benedictine Hospital for observation and later released, Corporal Ray Dunn of the Phoenicia state police station reported. The car was owned by her brother Gerardo Caruso of Mt. Pleasant.

President Deplores

that seems, at this moment, to be the cause of so much division among us?"

In addition to criticizing those who cause "division," the President attacked "doubters" who "begin to fear other people's ideas" and "begin to talk about censoring the sources and the communication of ideas."

"The honest men and women among these would-be censors and regulators may merely forget that the price of their success would be the destruction of that way of life they want to preserve," he said.

"But the dishonest and the disloyal among them know exactly what they are attempting to do—perverting and undermining a free society while falsely swearing allegiance to it."

He cautioned against allowing "ourselves to be persuaded that every individual—or party—that takes issue with our convictions is necessarily wicked or treasonous."

When that happens, he said, "then indeed we are approaching the end of freedom's road."

He also warned against confusing "honest dissent with disloyal subversion," noting that "we are descended in blood and spirit from revolutionaries and rebels—men and women who dared to dissent from accepted doctrine."

Turning to global matters, the President said America is committed to two far-reaching policies:

"First and foremost, we are dedicated to the building of a cooperative peace, based upon truth, justice and fairness.

"Second: To pursue this effectively, we seek the strengthening of America—and her friends—in love of liberty, in knowledge and comprehension, in a dependable prosperity widely shared, and in a military posture adequate for security."

In such policies, he said, "there is no iota of aggression No intent to exploit others or deny them their rightful place and space in the world."

He added that his administration knows that "every negotiation with the Communists would be fraught with traps and pitfalls." But he said "positive, determined day-to-day toil would pay real dividends among free nations."

500-million-dollar bond issue to finance construction of the thruway. Tallamy said estimates that led to that request were based on the costs of superhighways in other states and on preliminary construction on the thruway in New York.

Tallamy said that rising costs were the main reason for the new overall figure.

The 962 million includes 58 million dolars to be contributed by the federal government for toll-free sections of the expressway and $81,000,134, advanced by the state for initial expenditures.

Tallamy said the toll schedule had been set "to assure that there will be ample revenues" to retire bond issues for thruway construction.

The $20 permit will entitle a holder to unlimited travel west of Spring Valley and on the Berkshire spur. Thus a motorist holding a permit may drive between New York and Buffalo for 60 cents—a 10-cent charge at the Yonkers barrier and a 50-cent toll over the Tarrytown-Nyack bridge.

The $5.60 fee, which averages about 1¼ cents a mile, would get a driver only to the edge of Buffalo. There will be two toll stations on the Niagara section in Buffalo and at two bridges to Grand Island.

There will be two similar charges in the New York metropolitan area and on the Berksire section, and a minimum of 25 cents will be charged at a bridge that is to be built across the Hudson about 10 miles south of Albany. The bridge will connect the main thruway with the Berkshire spur.

President Deplores

seph R. McCarthy (R.-Wis.) with whom the administration has differed sharply in recent weeks.

"I am not going to try to interpret the President's remarks," Hagerty answered.

McCarthy could not be reached for comment.

The speech was a major statement of the President's views on how communism should be combatted. His voice grew thick with emotion when he referred to "demagogues" and "division." Those parts of his speech were thunderously applauded by his listeners.

The nationally televised speech was heard by some 1,800 alumni, faculty members and friends of Columbia University who jammed the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel and another 400 who overflowed into an adjoining dining room. A score of college presidents were in the audience.

It was a homecoming of sorts for Eisenhower, who was Columbia's president from 1948 until shortly before his inauguration last year. Applause interrupted the 30-minute speech 21 times.

After stating that America is completely united in opposing communism, the President added: "Yet, my friends, and I say this sadly, is there any other subject that seems, at this moment, to be the cause of so much division among us?"

In addition to criticizing those who cause "division," the President attacked "doubters" who "begin to fear other people's ideas" and "begin to talk about censoring the sources and the communication of ideas."

"The honest men and women among these would-be censors and regulators may merely forget that the price of their success would be the destruction of that way of life they want to preserve," he said.

AUTO INDUSTRY AND HIGHWAYS

More and more, the motor makers and the companies which finance car purchases are showing they appreciate the vital stake they have in improvement of the nation's inadequate highway system.

They are voicing genuine concern that further growth of their markets may be handicapped by the menace of traffic congestion.

Arthur Dietz, president of Commercial Investment Trust, one of the major automobile credit firms, touched on the problem with some telling figures in a recent speech at Detroit.

About 35 per cent of American families don't own a car. Many of these, of course, are low-income families which cannot afford the cost. But millions who could pay the price apparently won't pay it because they don't think a car is worth owning.

The cast majority of careless people live in urban areas. According to Dietz, in cities of 500,000 or more, 45 per cent of the families fall into the nonowner group. Naturally, the poor also are concentrated there.

But there is no doubt in anybody's mind that the cities are bursting at the seams traffic-wise.

Even if a family with a car does manage to work free of city snarls, it finds things just about as bad on the parkways and other arteries taking traffic away from the centers.

One of Dietz' most astounding figures is this: U. S. motorists do 86 per cent of their driving on only 23 per cent of the country's highways. In other words, some 700,000 miles of the 3,000,000 miles of our road network take a terrific pounding, while all the rest of the mileage bears but 14 per cent of the load.

Obviously, the overwhelming need is for new and improved roads to ease the burden on that critical 700,000 miles.

Last year the United States spent around $5.2 billion for roads, but $2.2 billion went merely for maintenance of the existing system. As has been said again and again, this is far from enough. Our highway deficiency is estimated at $50 billion.

The experts figure that to make up this deficit and keep pace with further national development we ought to spend perhaps $11 billion a year on highways for the next 10 years. Of this annual total, $8 billion would be for new and improved roads, the rest for maintenance.

Every year that goes by without a real attack on the problem deepens the highway deficit. Certainly this will be bad for the motor makers and those allied with them. But that's not the end. It will be bad for all of us.

The cities and the arteries that feed them are choking with automobiles. One day they may be strangled as economic entities unless our public authorities—up to the highest level—go beyond trying to wish the problem away with inadequate highway outlays.

Big problems cost big money. The price of failure to lay it out can be big trouble.

COMMON RESPONSIBILITY

In this complex world of ours every man is, at least in part, responsible for the security and the well-being of every other man.

Recently police in Cleveland, Ohio, arrested a man who admitted a brutal and perverted attack on a four-year-old boy. In the course of the manhunt a number of people called the police with information they thought important. One woman called to say that she had noticed a man molesting teen-age girls in the same neighborhood where the victim lived, several weeks before the unfortunate event occurred. She had not called police at that time because she did not want to "become involved."

It may be that the man who annoyed the young girls was the same man who attacked the boy. But it may be that the molestor of the girls is still at large and will later commit a vicious crime. Had the woman called the police immediately he might have been apprehended.

Any responsibility we shirk because we find it inconvenient to accept it weakens the structure of all society. When we turn our back on things, as this woman and others did, we are running the risk that our own home or that of our neighbor will be threatened. The question we must answer is age-old: Are we our brother's keeper? The answer must be yes.

'These Days'

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

THE NEW CONCENTRATION

The greatest danger to the capitalist system is monopoly, particularly money monopoly. Therefore in every capitalist country it is essential to take measures to prevent the concentration of wealth, which is not only dangerous economically but politically. The joining of vast wealth with political power can destroy the essential characteristic of a free system, which is equality of opportunity.

In the late 19th century and early years in what in those days were called trusts, combinations in restraint of trade, groups of individuals or corporations which combined either to control a commodity or the method of distributing that commodity. Associations of banks and corporations, of powerful groups of financiers with powerful groups of industrialists were broken up after a series of Congressional investigations, acts of Congress and decisions of the Courts.

Currently new concentrations of wealth have appeared which imperil the economy of the nation. In some respects, these new concentrations result from the laws designed to prevent them; in others they are the product of income and inheritance tax laws. These may be placed into five categories:

1. Life insurance companies;
2. The Welfare Funds;
3. Pension funds of various types;
4. Untaxed funds of labor unions;
5. Foundations.

1. Most life insurance companies are mutual associations owned by their policyholders, who benefit by dividends which often reduce the cost of the policy to the purchaser. The prolongation of life in the United States has strengthened the reserves of the life insurance companies.

Most of the insurance companies have adopted progressive social attitudes, utilizing their funds in the provision of needed new housing and in distributing capital for sound purposes. Nevertheless, the capital reserves of these companies are extraordinarily large, in some respects representing the largest reserves in the country.

2. Welfare Funds are a newer social device to which often the employer and the employe contribute. The methods of gathering and distributing these funds vary. In some cases, the labor unions control the funds. There have been no adequate investigations of these funds nor are they regulated either to protect the beneficiaries or the public.

3. Pension funds are very complicated and varied. They all arise from the fact that people live longer. From the standpoint of industry, a man is regarded as old when he reaches 65; many persons outlive that year and are even capable of important mental and physical work after the age of 65. Companies which have established a retirement age, either for executives or workers, often provide a pension system to make separation from work easier and their later years more secure. An interesting book on this subject, "Industrial Pensions," by Charles L. Dearing, has just been published by The Brookings Institution.

In relation to this subject, a few statistics are interesting: In 1900, 4.1 per cent of the American population was 65 years and over; in 1930, it was 5.4 per cent; in 1950, it was 8.2 per cent. The expectancy is that in 1960 it will be 9.2 per cent. This means that the pension load on industry will increase and the reserves for such perisions will grow ever larger.

4. Labor unions have been accumulating funds in enormous quantities, running sometimes into hundreds of millions of dollars. Some of these funds are invested in real estate and in industry. None of it is subject to income tax. The more honest and efficient the management of a labor union, the larger the accumulation of its funds. While many unions issue annual reports, these funds are not often subject to any control, not even by the members of the unions. These vast treasuries are being used politically, in contrast with corporations, which are forbidden to engage in such processes.

5. The Foundations usually represent the accumulations of wealth by men who are dead—although there are some which are established by men who are alive. These enormous funds may only be used for public purposes, for the improvement of society. They do make investments to protect their funds. A sort of combination exists among the managers of these funds through associations of their own devising or through joint subsidies to organizations and institutions. The Foundations are now being investigated by a Congressional committee.

This whole subject needs to be studied not antagonistically but so that all the facts may be available.

CANCER PATIENTS MAY LIVE A LONG TIME

When the physician has reason to believe that cancer may be present in his patient, and a biopsy is performed (that is, removing a very small piece of the suspected tissue and examining it under the microscope to see if cancer cells are present), which reveals true cancer, the patient may feel that the end is in sight. He may give up all hope of living any kind of a useful life because he knows that cancer is always fatal. What he likely forgets is that many cases of cancer are chronic, are very slow to develop, and that many years of worthwhile living may yet be in store for him.

In Annals of Surgery, Drs. John J. and J. H. Morton state that out of a long experience at Rochester, New York, they reviewed seventeen cases of cancer originating in various organs yet each had a long period of useful survival although malignant disease was still present. There were several cases of "metastatic" cancer of the thyroid gland in which the original cancer was never found. "Metastatic" means a spread or transfer of a disease from one organ or part to another organ or part which is not directly connected with it. Thus, a cancer in the kidney might metastasize to the thyroid gland. It is possible for cancer to metastasize or spread to any section of the body. Cases of long survivals (19 and 20 years) of cancer of the kidney and breast, with eventual recurrences, are given. Even patients with diffuse (widespread, not definitely limited or localized) involvement of the abdominal organs may survive comfortably for many years as illustrated by cases of cancer of the adrenal gland, lung and other organs.

Our research physicians are working now on such problems of why cancer will grow slowly in some cases and rapidly in others but the question is as yet unanswered. Because of the differing response of individuals to cancer, some living for months only and some for years, the physician should be cautious in estimating the survival of any patient suffering from any form of location of cancer. For some, many years of hopefulness and helpfulness will be in store even if the diagnosis of cancer is certain.

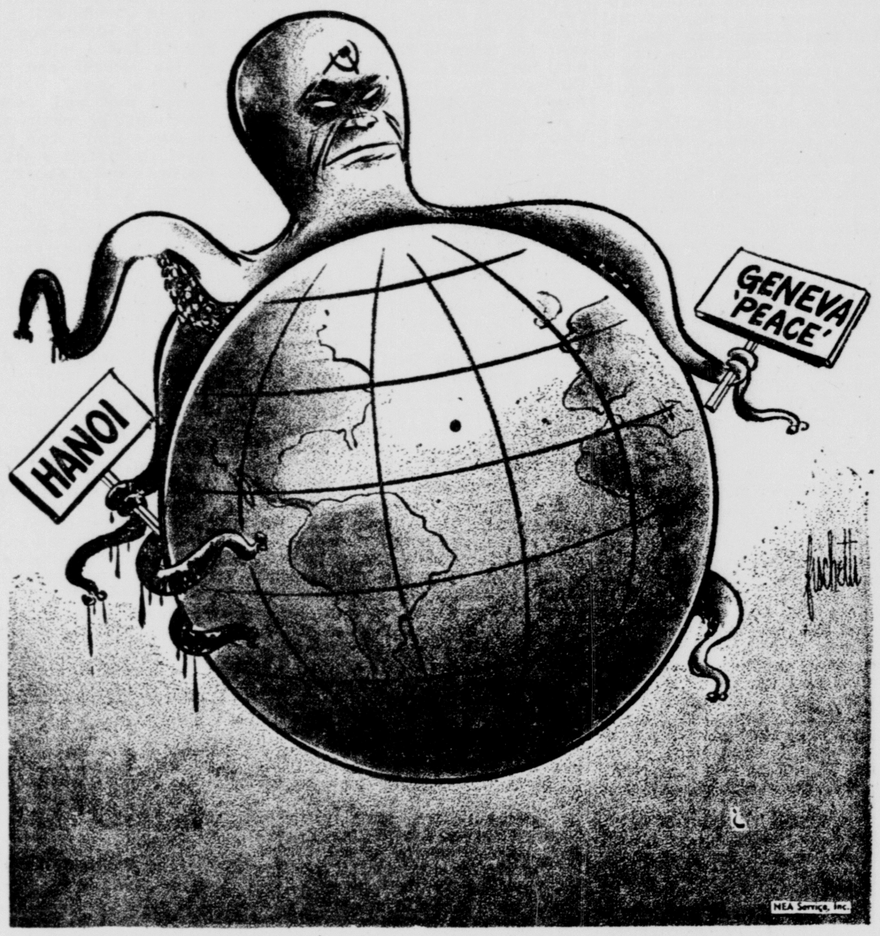
Tale of Two Cities



Edson's Washington News Notebook

By PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

Washington, (NEA)—One aspect of the Supreme Court's unanimous decision outlawing school segregation which has not yet been given consideration is what happens to the teachers.

All the emotional utterances on this far-reaching reform have so far been in the nature of speculations on how the politicians, the parents and finally the pupils themselves—in about that order—will adapt themselves to the new situation.

Enough time has now elapsed for everyone concerned to get a few nights' sleep and view the problem with more calm than was at first manifest. One thing is clear. Nothing is going to happen precipitously.

The schools will reopen next fall pretty much as in the past. It will be October before the Supreme Court hears arguments on what kind of a decree it should hand down to put the new system into effect. It will be some months after that before the order is issued. There must be another full school year in which to make the transition.

In areas where there is a natural economic segregation of rich and poor, or a housing segregation that hangs over from old restrictive covenants, there may be no great problem. There will be predominantly white schools and predominately colored schools pretty much as they are today.

This will apply to most of the 17 southern states where segregation has been legal, and to the big northern cities like New York, Chicago and Detroit with their black belts. The problem will be concentrated largely in the fringe areas.

It is not so much a problem of race relations as it is of personnel management by school administrators. It may be idealistic perfection to say that teacher assignments of the future will be made without discrimination. But some white teachers simply won't be able to handle classes predominantly colored, and vice versa. The temperament of each teacher will have to be considered for fitness in any particular assignment.

Unfortunately, there aren't very satisfactorily statistics on the supply of colored teachers. In some states like New York it is against the law to keep records of teachers by race. The figures are available only in the 17 segregated southern states. In District of Columbia the figures are available through teacher certificates issued for Division One (white) and Division Two (colored).

The best approximations of U. S. Office of Education and National Education Association are that in 1950 there were between 80,000 and 100,000 colored teachers for the 3,200,000 colored children enrolled in U. S. elementary and high schools. In the 17 southern states and District of Columbia there were 74,558 colored teachers.

In general there has been a great shortage of qualified white teachers for the public schools in recent years, but a surplus of colored teachers. Many cities have had to employ temporary, uncertified white teachers because qualified college-trained teachers were not available. With a surplus of qualified colored teachers now available for non-segregated schools, many states may face the need of re-examining and recertifying or dropping their temporary teachers.

In 1950, in North Carolina, for instance, 98 per cent of the colored teachers had college degrees, while only 88 per cent of the white teachers had them. Similarly, in 1950 North Carolina employed 1707 new white teachers, though its colleges graduated only 704 qualified teachers for elementary schools. By contrast, North Carolina hired only 359 colored teachers, though 460 were graduated.

The training which the colored teachers received may not have been up to the standard of the white colleges. But this example points up the fact that there is a surplus of colored teachers to meet the shortage of white teachers—if they can be employed.

National Education Association has no racial bars and many of its members—it doesn't know how many—are colored teachers. Fifteen states and the District of Columbia have had separate branches of the colored American Teachers' Association. Delaware and Missouri A. T. A. organizations have now merged with N. E. A. and the Maryland organization is in the process of merging. So far as the teachers themselves are concerned, they appear ready to end segregation on short order.

American, French Politics Are Regarded as Being Similar as to Intrigues, Ambitions

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Paris, June 1—American politics and French politics may differ in subject matter, but they are much the same as one sees arrayed on one side the partisan politicians, with their intrigues of personal ambition, and on the other the earnest individuals who sincerely want to serve their country with policies in the national interest.

Just as the question of whether America should or should not intervene in Southeast Asia causes members of Congress to put a partisan twist to their comments, so here the whole Indo-China problem is deeply immersed in party politics. What's more, many of the members of Parliament who are attacking the cabinet on Indo-China policy actually have been using that issue as a means of weakening the efforts of the present cabinet to secure the ratification of the European Defense Community agreement so much desired by the United States.

It is not necessary, however, to analyze the many cross-currents of French politics to realize that, as in America, the people are often way ahead of their Congress and the executive. So also here the people of France have in the last two weeks shown that they are far ahead of all the partisan politicians in their concept of what is the true national interest.

In the recently held special elections the people have elected candidates who were outspokenly in favor of ratifying the European Defense Community agreement—something that so many members of Parliament have opposed on the assumption that the voters didn't want it. Also, the reaction to the defeat at Dien Bien Phu has been exactly opposite to what was being generally predicted—namely, that France's effort to fight further in Indo-China would collapse and a peace at any price would be accepted at Geneva.

Maybe the tide was turned by the fact that 100 Communist deputies sat silently in their seats while the rest of the Parliament rose in tribute to the French soldiers who had defended Dien Bien Phu so heroically. Certainly the French people were shocked by the discovery that they had in their own Parliament so-called Frenchmen who were really playing the Communist game. Ever since that incident there has been a noticeable change all around. The French cabinet stiffened in its approach to the problems of Geneva and gave Foreign Minister Bidault strong support in his search for an honorable armistice. This was backed up by the call of 80,000 draftees to the colors for service in Europe and North Africa so as to release about 30,000 more trained regulars for Indochina.

Likewise, the cabinet took the very bold step of consulting Marshal Juin, who was recently reprimanded for his remarks against the European Defense Community Agreement. It is evident that past grudges are being laid aside. Most of the parties here are rallying to the defense of something bigger than any single man or party—the honor and prestige of France.

It is to be noted also that the opposition leaders have changed their tone somewhat and seem disinclined now to upset the Laniel cabinet. This is based on a fear of more serious consequences if Geneva negotiations are bogged down by a French cabinet change. It shows also the political sagacity of the French politician who thinks it is best for an outgoing government to deal for a while longer with a delicate and messy situation and for a new cabinet to take over only when the critical phases are out of the way.

As far as the European Defense Community Agreement is concerned, ratification looks more likely than it has in a long time. Partly this is because the Socialist Party Congress has voted not only to support it but also to impose "discipline," which means in American political parlance imposing a caucus rule that binds all members to vote as the majority does. Nearly half of the Socialists had publicly opposed EDC before. It's a kind of "unit rule," familiar to American national political conventions. Since the Socialist strength in Parliament is substantial, hopes for ratifying EDC are rising.

As one surveys the scene here, it seems obvious that even if the EDC agreement had not been sponsored by America, the French people themselves would in time have clamored for just such a solution. For if the peoples of the continent did not want to defend themselves, why should American divisions be stationed in Europe and risk annihilation? That's the basic issue, and sooner or later the people here would have come to see the wisdom of the plan from their own standpoint, just as the West German government has already recognized it by giving the agreement its approval.

For if EDC should fail, the alternative would be immediate admission of Germany into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. This would mean a national army for Germany, and the French don't want to see that happen any more than do the German Socialists who are so antagonistic to anything like a revival of militarism. The EDC agreement provides for a combined army that no one nation will dominate. The plan has many flaws and handicaps, but in the current situation it is better to take the project as it is and amend it later than to confront the Communists with disunited or disorganized military ingredients when the need is so urgent for solidarity and military coordination and efficiency, as a deterrent to aggression.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York, May 30—A man who used to run a battery of slot machines in a privately-owned, public-fee, golf course has written me about this phase of his business. People, he says, love to play slot machines and I agree, and I insist that they should have access to slots to play as much as they like.

Congress did not have the courage to lay it down in a federal law that people should be forbidden to gamble on slot machines. Congress knew it would look ridiculous if it said that anyone caught cranking a quarter or a nickel into a machine should get from one to ten years or a $10,000 fine. So Congress adopted a subterfuge, forbidding the interstate transportation of an extremely intricate and interesting mechanical device. That machine of itself, is as innocent as a sewing machine, a typewriter or an automobile.

If Congress has a duty to impose criminal penalties for the interstate transportation of such a machine just because it can be used for gambling, the Congress is remiss in the same duty in failing to provide the same verboten as to playing cards and dice and the transmission of race results and odds. Nobody above the age of childhood plays cards or shoots crap for fun. Some people become obsessed with bridge, a most unsocial, angrifying game.

I have known cultured individuals of considerable means who have played for blood and have made a steady profit at it. One I have in mind is the late Frank Crowninshield, of Vanity Fair. A more courteous, interesting man I never met, but at bridge he was a hateful little devil. However, bridge was his pleasure and I didn't have to play with him and didn't.

Only a clown in Congress would think of introducing a bill to outlaw bridge as a federal crime, but there is no essential difference between a bridge deck and the slots. This pestiferous law was slipped over on us in panic in consequence of the Kefauver burlesque as an easy means of smothering rackets which had sprung up in localities where politicians and police officials were taking graft for permitting violations of local laws. Of course such local laws were being violated but that is no legitimate business of the U. S. Congress. And, if it were, the honest way to intervene would be to pass a law to punish such grafters.

The informant who has been pouring his heart out to me reminds me that these things produced, in a painless way, the profit which enabled many legitimate clubs and veterans' outfits as well as social centers of the armed services to render pleasant and desirable accommodation to many individuals.

I don't know any reliable figures on the subject, but I have an impression that on the average the slots never took much money away from many individuals. They took a little from a lot of players and the loss was spread thin among many with the result that these centers could sell good cheap meals at little or no profit. That law did not affect machines already in the possession of operators in the several states but the commotion resulting from the sensational hearings in New York stimulated local officials in most of the states to fussy activity. Dead-letter laws were dusted off and the slots went into hiding in clubs where poker and bridge are still played openly for high stakes. They are still out of sight in most jurisdictions.

The remedy here should start in the city councils and state Legislatures. Even now, federal law exacts a license fee for slots presumed to have been planted in the several states before the law was passed, so our Uncle Sam finds himself collecting a fee under one law for permitting criminals to operate a machine which is condemned as immoral in another law. It would be no more immoral to sell federal licenses to prostitutes.

In Chicago and outlying Cook county there has been from time to time a "syndicate" of gangsters which was believed to have paid $50 a month graft on each machine to local officials. But the money should have gone into the public treasuries under the proper license and, if the Kefauver testimony was true, it would have added a sizeable amount to public revenues. Perhaps it would not be as much as $50 a month under public license because the "syndicate" slots often are geared to yield no more than 50 per cent to the players. However, the higher the yield to the players, the more they play. When a machine is too "tight" the play falls off.

I have said that I like to play slots and roulette. I doubt however that I would make a career of it if both were legalized and I would not go running to the cops if I lost because I know what I am doing and I would play to win.

It would be much more reasonable to adopt a federal law against Interstate Commerce in pistols but we haven't. A few years ago I bought a .22 target pistol from Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Strum, of Westport, Conn., who were running a little factory and

More and more, the motor makers and the companies which finance car purchases are showing they appreciate the vital stake they have in improvement of the nation's inadequate highway system.

They are voicing genuine concern that further growth of their markets may be handicapped by the menace of traffic congestion.

Arthur Dietz, president of Commercial Investment Trust, one of the major automobile credit firms, touched on the problem with some telling figures in a recent speech at Detroit.

About 35 per cent of American families don't own a car. Many of these, of course, are low-income families which cannot afford the cost. But millions who could pay the price apparently won't pay it because they don't think a car is worth owning.

The cast majority of careless people live in urban areas. According to Dietz, in cities of 500,000 or more, 45 per cent of the families fall into the nonowner group. Naturally, the poor also are concentrated there.

But there is no doubt in anybody's mind that the cities are bursting at the seams traffic-wise.

Even if a family with a car does manage to work free of city snarls, it finds things just about as bad on the parkways and other arteries taking traffic away from the centers.

One of Dietz' most astounding figures is this: U. S. motorists do 86 per cent of their driving on only 23 per cent of the country's highways. In other words, some 700,000 miles of the 3,000,000 miles of our road network take a terrific pounding, while all the rest of the mileage bears but 14 per cent of the load.

Obviously, the overwhelming need is for new and improved roads to ease the burden on that critical 700,000 miles.

Last year the United States spent around $5.2 billion for roads, but $2.2 billion went merely for maintenance of the existing system. As has been said again and again, this is far from enough. Our highway deficiency is estimated at $50 billion.

The experts figure that to make up this deficit and keep pace with further national development we ought to spend perhaps $11 billion a year on highways for the next 10 years. Of this annual total, $8 billion would be for new and improved roads, the rest for maintenance.

Every year that goes by without a real attack on the problem deepens the highway deficit. Certainly this will be bad for the motor makers and those allied with them. But that's not the end. It will be bad for all of us.

The cities and the arteries that feed them are choking with automobiles. One day they may be strangled as economic entities unless our public authorities—up to the highest level—go beyond trying to wish the problem away with inadequate highway outlays.

Big problems cost big money. The price of failure to lay it out can be big trouble.

COMMON RESPONSIBILITY

In this complex world of ours every man is, at least in part, responsible for the security and the well-being of every other man.

Recently police in Cleveland, Ohio, arrested a man who admitted a brutal and perverted attack on a four-year-old boy. In the course of the manhunt a number of people called the police with information they thought important. One woman called to say that she had noticed a man molesting teen-age girls in the same neighborhood where the victim lived, several weeks before the unfortunate event occurred. She had not called police at that time because she did not want to "become involved."

It may be that the man who annoyed the young girls was the same man who attacked the boy. But it may be that the molestor of the girls is still at large and will later commit a vicious crime. Had the woman called the police immediately he might have been apprehended.

Any responsibility we shirk because we find it inconvenient to accept it weakens the structure of all society. When we turn our back on things, as this woman and others did, we are running the risk that our own home or that of our neighbor will be threatened. The question we must answer is age-old: Are we our brother's keeper? The answer must be yes.

'These Days'

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

THE NEW CONCENTRATION

The greatest danger to the capitalist system is monopoly, particularly money monopoly. Therefore in every capitalist country it is essential to take measures to prevent the concentration of wealth, which is not only dangerous economically but politically. The joining of vast wealth with political power can destroy the essential characteristic of a free system, which is equality of opportunity.

In the late 19th century and early years in what in those days were called trusts, combinations in restraint of trade, groups of individuals or corporations which combined either to control a commodity or the method of distributing that commodity. Associations of banks and corporations, of powerful groups of financiers with powerful groups of industrialists were broken up after a series of Congressional investigations, acts of Congress and decisions of the Courts.

Currently new concentrations of wealth have appeared which imperil the economy of the nation. In some respects, these new concentrations result from the laws designed to prevent them; in others they are the product of income and inheritance tax laws. These may be placed into five categories:

1. Life insurance companies;
2. The Welfare Funds;
3. Pension funds of various types;
4. Untaxed funds of labor unions;
5. Foundations.

1. Most life insurance companies are mutual associations owned by their policyholders, who benefit by dividends which often reduce the cost of the policy to the purchaser. The prolongation of life in the United States has strengthened the reserves of the life insurance companies.

Most of the insurance companies have adopted progressive social attitudes, utilizing their funds in the provision of needed new housing and in distributing capital for sound purposes. Nevertheless, the capital reserves of these companies are extraordinarily large, in some respects representing the largest reserves in the country.

2. Welfare Funds are a newer social device to which often the employer and the employe contribute. The methods of gathering and distributing these funds vary. In some cases, the labor unions control the funds. There have been no adequate investigations of these funds nor are they regulated either to protect the beneficiaries or the public.

3. Pension funds are very complicated and varied. They all arise from the fact that people live longer. From the standpoint of industry, a man is regarded as old when he reaches 65; many persons outlive that year and are even capable of important mental and physical work after the age of 65. Companies which have established a retirement age, either for executives or workers, often provide a pension system to make separation from work easier and their later years more secure. An interesting book on this subject, "Industrial Pensions," by Charles L. Dearing, has just been published by The Brookings Institution.

In relation to this subject, a few statistics are interesting: In 1900, 4.1 per cent of the American population was 65 years and over; in 1930, it was 5.4 per cent; in 1950, it was 8.2 per cent. The expectancy is that in 1960 it will be 9.2 per cent. This means that the pension load on industry will increase and the reserves for such pensions will grow ever larger.

4. Labor unions have been accumulating funds in enormous quantities, running sometimes into hundreds of millions of dollars. Some of these funds are invested in real estate and in industry. None of it is subject to income tax. The more honest and efficient the management of a labor union, the larger the accumulation of its funds. While many unions issue annual reports, these funds are not often subject to any control, not even by the members of the unions. These vast treasuries are being used politically, in contrast with corporations, which are forbidden to engage in such processes.

5. The Foundations usually represent the accumulations of wealth by men who are dead—although there are some which are established by men who are alive. These enormous funds may only be used for public purposes, for the improvement of society. They do make investments to protect their funds. A sort of combination exists among the managers of these funds through associations of their own devising or through joint subsidies to organizations and institutions. The Foundations are now being investigated by a Congressional committee.

This whole subject needs to be studied not antagonistically but so that all the facts may be available.

Washington, (NEA)—One aspect of the Supreme Court's unanimous decision outlawing school segregation which has not yet been given consideration is what happens to the teachers.

All the emotional utterances on this far-reaching reform have so far been in the nature of speculations on how the politicians, the parents and finally the pupils themselves—in about that order—will adapt themselves to the new situation.

Enough time has now elapsed for everyone concerned to get a few nights' sleep and view the problem with more calm than was at first manifest. One thing is clear. Nothing is going to happen precipitously.

The schools will reopen next fall pretty much as in the past. It will be October before the Supreme Court hears arguments on what kind of a decree it should hand down to put the new system into effect. It will be some months after that before the order is issued. There must be another full school year in which to make the transition.

In areas where there is a natural economic segregation of rich and poor, or a housing segregation that hangs over from old restrictive covenants, there may be no great problem. There will be predominantly white schools and predominately colored schools pretty much as they are today.

This will apply to most of the 17 southern states where segregation has been legal, and to the big northern cities like New York, Chicago and Detroit with their black belts. The problem will be concentrated largely in the fringe areas.

It is not so much a problem of race relations as it is of personnel management by school administrators. It may be idealistic perfection to say that teacher assignments of the future will be made without discrimination. But some white teachers simply won't be able to handle classes predominantly colored, and vice versa. The temperament of each teacher will have to be considered for fitness in any particular assignment.

Unfortunately, there aren't very satisfactorily statistics on the supply of colored teachers. In some states like New York it is against the law to keep records of teachers by race. The figures are available only in the 17 segregated southern states. In District of Columbia the figures are available through teacher certificates issued for Division One (white) and Division Two (colored).

The best approximations of U. S. Office of Education and National Education Association are that in 1950 there were between 80,000 and 100,000 colored teachers for the 3,200,000 colored children enrolled in U. S. elementary and high schools. In the 17 southern states and District of Columbia there were 74,558 colored teachers.

In general there has been a great shortage of qualified white teachers for the public schools in recent years, but a surplus of colored teachers. Many cities have had to employ temporary, uncertified white teachers because qualified college-trained teachers were not available. With a surplus of qualified colored teachers now available for non-segregated schools, many states may face the need of re-examining and recertifying or dropping their temporary teachers.

In 1950, in North Carolina, for instance, 98 per cent of the colored teachers had college degrees, while only 88 per cent of the white teachers had them. Similarly, in 1950 North Carolina employed 1707 new white teachers, though its colleges graduated only 704 qualified teachers for elementary schools. By contrast, North Carolina hired only 359 colored teachers, though 460 were graduated.

The training which the colored teachers received may not have been up to the standard of the white colleges. But this example points up the fact that there is a surplus of colored teachers to meet the shortage of white teachers—if they can be employed.

National Education Association has no racial bars and many of its members—it doesn't know how many—are colored teachers. Fifteen states and the District of Columbia have had separate branches of the colored American Teachers' Association. Delaware and Missouri A. T. A. organizations have now merged with N. E. A. and the Maryland organization is in the process of merging. So far as the teachers themselves are concerned, they appear ready to end segregation on short order.

American, French Politics Are Regarded as Being Similar as to Intrigues, Ambitions

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Paris, June 1—American politics and French politics may differ in subject matter, but they are much the same as one sees arrayed on one side the partisan politicians, with their intrigues of personal ambition, and on the other the earnest individuals who sincerely want to serve their country with policies in the national interest.

Just as the question of whether America should or should not intervene in Southeast Asia causes members of Congress to put a partisan twist to their comments, so here the whole Indo-China problem is deeply immersed in party politics. What's more, many of the members of Parliament who are attacking the cabinet on Indo-China policy actually have been using that issue as a means of weakening the efforts of the present cabinet to secure the ratification of the European Defense Community agreement so much desired by the United States.

It is not necessary, however, to analyze the many cross-currents of French politics to realize that, as in America, the people are often way ahead of their Congress and the executive. So also here the people of France have in the last two weeks shown that they are far ahead of all the partisan politicians in their concept of what is the true national interest.

In the recently held special elections the people have elected candidates who were outspokenly in favor of ratifying the European Defense Community agreement—something that so many members of Parliament have opposed on the assumption that the voters didn't want it. Also, the reaction to the defeat at Dien Bien Phu has been exactly opposite to what was being generally predicted—namely, that France's effort to fight further in Indo-China would collapse and a peace at any price would be accepted at Geneva.

Maybe the tide was turned by the fact that 100 Communist deputies sat silently in their seats while the rest of the Parliament rose in tribute to the French soldiers who had defended Dien Bien Phu so heroically. Certainly the French people were shocked by the discovery that they had in their own Parliament so-called Frenchmen who were really playing the Communist game. Ever since that incident there has been a noticeable change all around. The French cabinet stiffened in its approach to the problems of Geneva and gave Foreign Minister Bidault strong support in his search for an honorable armistice. This was backed up by the call of 80,000 draftees to the colors for service in Europe and North Africa so as to release about 30,000 more trained regulars for Indochina.

Likewise, the cabinet took the very bold step of consulting Marshal Juin, who was recently reprimanded for his remarks against the European Defense Community Agreement. It is evident that past grudges are being laid aside. Most of the parties here are rallying to the defense of something bigger than any single man or party—the honor and prestige of France.

It is to be noted also that the opposition leaders have changed their tone somewhat and seem disinclined now to upset the Laniel cabinet. This is based on a fear of more serious consequences if Geneva negotiations are bogged down by a French cabinet change. It shows also the political sagacity of the French politician who thinks it is best for an outgoing government to deal for a while longer with a delicate and messy situation and for a new cabinet to take over only when the critical phases are out of the way.

As far as the European Defense Community Agreement is concerned, ratification looks more likely than it has in a long time. Partly this is because the Socialist Party Congress has voted not only to support it but also to impose "discipline," which means in American political parlance imposing a caucus rule that binds all members to vote as the majority does. Nearly half of the Socialists had publicly opposed EDC before. It's a kind of "unit rule," familiar to American national political conventions. Since the Socialist strength in Parliament is substantial, hopes for ratifying EDC are rising.

As one surveys the scene here, it seems obvious that even if the EDC agreement had not been sponsored by America, the French people themselves would in time have clamored for just such a solution. For if the peoples of the continent did not want to defend themselves, why should American divisions be stationed in Europe and risk annihilation? That's the basic issue, and sooner or later the people here would have come to see the wisdom of the plan from their own standpoint, just as the West German government has already recognized it by giving the agreement its approval.

For if EDC should fail, the alternative would be immediate admission of Germany into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. This would mean a national army for Germany, and the French don't want to see that happen any more than do the German Socialists who are so antagonistic to anything like a revival of militarism. The EDC agreement provides for a combined army that no one nation will dominate. The plan has many flaws and handicaps, but in the current situation it is better to take the project as it is and amend it later than to confront the Communists with disunited or disorganized military ingredients when the need is so urgent for solidarity and military coordination and efficiency, as a deterrent to aggression.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York, May 30—A man who used to run a battery of slot machines in a privately-owned, public-fee, golf course has written me about this phase of his business. People, he says, love to play slot machines and I agree, and I insist that they should have access to slots to play as much as they like.

Congress did not have the courage to lay it down in a federal law that people should be forbidden to gamble on slot machines. Congress knew it would look ridiculous if it said that anyone caught cranking a quarter or a nickel into a machine should get from one to ten years or a $10,000 fine. So Congress adopted a subterfuge, forbidding the interstate transportation of an extremely intricate and interesting mechanical device. That machine of itself, is as innocent as a sewing machine, a typewriter or an automobile.

If Congress has a duty to impose criminal penalties for the interstate transportation of such a machine just because it can be used for gambling, the Congress is remiss in the same duty in failing to provide the same verboten as to playing cards and dice and the transmission of race results and odds. Nobody above the age of childhood plays cards or shoots crap for fun. Some people become obsessed with bridge, a most unsocial, angrifying game.

I have known cultured individuals of considerable means who have played for blood and have made a steady profit at it. One I have in mind is the late Frank Crowninshield, of Vanity Fair. A more courteous, interesting man I never met, but at bridge he was a hateful little devil. However, bridge was his pleasure and I didn't have to play with him and didn't.

Only a clown in Congress would think of introducing a bill to outlaw bridge as a federal crime, but there is no essential difference between a bridge deck and the slots. This pestiferous law was slipped over on us in panic in consequence of the Kefauver burlesque as an easy means of smothering rackets which had sprung up in localities where politicians and police officials were taking graft for permitting violations of local laws. Of course such local laws were being violated but that is no legitimate business of the U. S. Congress. And, if it were, the honest way to intervene would be to pass a law to punish such grafters.

The informant who has been pouring his heart out to me reminds me that these things produced, in a painless way, the profit which enabled many legitimate clubs and veterans' outfits as well as social centers of the armed services to render pleasant and desirable accommodation to many individuals.

I don't know any reliable figures on the subject, but I have an impression that on the average the slots never took much money away from many individuals. They took a little from a lot of players and the loss was spread thin among many with the result that these centers could sell good cheap meals at little or no profit. That law did not affect machines already in the possession of operators in the several states but the commotion resulting from the sensational hearings in New York stimulated local officials in most of the states to fussy activity. Dead-letter laws were dusted off and the slots went into hiding in clubs where poker and bridge are still played openly for high stakes. They are still out of sight in most jurisdictions.

The remedy here should start in the city councils and state Legislatures. Even now, federal law exacts a license fee for slots presumed to have been planted in the several states before the law was passed, so our Uncle Sam finds himself collecting a fee under one law for permitting criminals to operate a machine which is condemned as immoral in another law. It would be no more immoral to sell federal licenses to prostitutes.

In Chicago and outlying Cook county there has been from time to time a "syndicate" of gangsters which was believed to have paid $50 a month graft on each machine to local officials. But the money should have gone into the public treasuries under the proper license and, if the Kefauver testimony was true, it would have added a sizeable amount to public revenues. Perhaps it would not be as much as $50 a month under public license because the "syndicate" slots often are geared to yield no more than 50 per cent to the players. However, the higher the yield to the players, the more they play. When a machine is too "tight" the play falls off.

I have said that I like to play slots and roulette. I doubt however that I would make a career of it if both were legalized and I would not go running to the cops if I lost because I know what I am doing and I would play to win.

It would be much more reasonable to adopt a federal law against Interstate Commerce in pistols but we haven't. A few years ago I bought a .22 target pistol from Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Strum, of Westport, Conn., who were running a little factory and

CHEAP AT THE PRICE

At dinner a few nights ago, Arthur Garfield Hays, my attorney, told me an off-beat story which he said he had heard from a young lawyer connected with the N.A.A.C.P., the organization which brought the segregated schools issue before the Supreme Court....

Up until a few years ago, Willie Sullivan was just another Negro in another Southern town who worked as a porter in the principal hotel and did his best to stay out of trouble. And he was doing all right for himself until the night a salesman, staying at the hotel, reported that a wrist watch and some cuff links were missing from his room.

The sheriff was called in and, acting on information, he searched Willie's locker down in the basement and found the articles.

Now, the fact was that the porter had had nothing to do with the theft. What's more, he knew exactly who the real thief was—the pasty-faced night clerk at the desk who, more than once, to Willie's knowledge, had used his passkey to rob the guests.

It wasn't hard for Willie to guess what had happened: the night clerk had gotten panicky when the theft was reported, planted the stuff in the porter's locker, and tipped off the sheriff where to look. The clerk had never liked Willie anyhow and must have figured that if somebody had to go to jail it might as well be a good-for-nothing Negro porter.

As might be expected, Willie Sullivan got nowhere when he protested his innocence. He was arrested and, in due course, his case came up in court. The young lawyer appointed to defend him never had a chance. The judge seemed as disinterested in the porter's pleas as the arresting officer had been and, again in due course, Willie found himself in the county jail serving a three-to-five-year sentence for "grand larceny."

As anyone who bathes regularly knows, there are jails in this country which are a lot more venal than penal, and the institution to which Willie was committed was right out of Erskine Caldwell. Its warden was a suspender-snapping political appointee who would do anything for 50 cents and twice as much for $1. Extra blankets, whiskey, T-bone steaks — everything was available at a price. For five whole dollars a prisoner could even spend a night away from jail, the only stipulation being that he keep away from the center of town.

A week before he was due to be released, Willie wrote to the lawyer who had defended him and said he wanted to talk to him. When the lawyer came to see him in his cell, Willie told him about the situation in the jail.

"Interesting," said the lawyer, "but it's none of your concern. You'll be out of here in a few days."

"No I won't," said Willie. "While I was locked up, I committed a real crime. About seven months ago, I saved up five dollars and bribed the warden to let me out for a night. I want you to go to the judge and tell him that."

"I see no point in confessing to something everybody does and gets away with," said the lawyer. "If I tell the judge he'll have no alternative but to tack on another year to your sentence."

"I know all that," said Willie "but I still want you to do it. You see, the night the warden let me out, I went home to see my wife. Now, here just last week I got a letter from her, and you know what it says in the letter? It says she didn't want to tell me before, but she's seven months gone with a baby. In another two months, Mr. Lawyer, that baby is going to be born, and people are gonna be asking how come, with me in jail and all. The way I look at it, it's worth an extra year in jail to let people know the baby is mine."

TAXES AND PROSPERITY

Most Americans are not fully aware of how much taxes impede prosperity.

For instance, the average individual in our country with an income of $4,500 in 1954 will have a tax bill of about $1,443. Broken down into its component parts, this load would be divided as follows:

1. Personal, Federal, State, Local and Corporation Taxes	$ 724
2. Excise Taxes	381
3. Social Security	189
4. Property Taxes	149
Total	$ 1,443

That is a terrific burden on millions of our best citizens. It lies behind much of America's social and economic unrest. These taxes, coupled with high prices and living costs, are eating away the very fabric of thrift and saving so vital to our national welfare.

Look at the excise tax bill. Few people realize its immensity. Excises are exacted against scores of products and services. To illustrate: Let us suppose that I am flying to the Pacific Coast and I need a new bag. On the trip I purchase a camera and some film. Necessity demands daily telephone calls. I buy train tickets and airline passage. I see some shows and some baseball games. On a month's trip I pay excise taxes in the amount of over $150.

$381 does not begin to cover a third of my excise tax bill. When one buys furs, jewelry, luggage, toilet preparations, electric, oil and gas appliances, sporting goods, cameras, lenses and film and a dozen other things, such taxes must be paid.

Admissions to sporting events, safe deposit rentals, transportation, local and long distance telephone calls—these are subject to excises.

Cigarettes, spirits, gasoline and such like are also excise tax producers.

Most people earning $4,500 a year and paying an average of $1,443 in taxes are today in an economic straitjacket. Many of them are numbered in the group carrying consumer credit in the amount of about 28 billion dollars.

On the Congresisonal agenda in Washington are measures to lift these tax pressures off the backs of millions of Americans.

If a person paying $1,443 a year in taxes could have his bill cut to $1,000 he would have $443 additional to spend. If he were 30 years of age, such savings would pay (counting dividends) for $20,000 of life insurance. And such savings invested in growth stocks would amount (with the re-investment of dividends) to $7,000-$10,000 in 10 years.

I would suggest that every taxpayer reading these lines whose economic fortunes are inseparably connected with governmental spending write his Congressman and his Senator voicing the hope that his representatives in Washington do everything in their power to lift the tax load off his shoulders.

As I have recently stated in this column, tax savings all along the line can give a tremendous economic stimulus to prosperity. In the Senate and the House of Representatives there are able leaders in both parties who thoroughly understand that great good can result from federal economies and tax reductions.

The measures along these lines now being considered in Washington are most cheering. It is possible that, with their passage, America will come into one of her most dynamic periods of prosperity.

Admissions to sporting events, safe deposit rentals, transportation, local and long distance telephone calls—these are subject to excises.

Cigarettes, spirits, gasoline and such like are also excise tax producers.

Most people earning $4,500 a year and paying an average of $1,443 in taxes are today in an economic straitjacket. Many of them are numbered in the group carrying consumer credit in the amount of about 28 billion dollars.

On the Congresional agenda in Washington are measures to lift these tax pressures off the backs of millions of Americans.

If a person paying $1,443 a year in taxes could have his bill cut to $1,000 he would have $443 additional to spend. If he were 30 years of age, such savings would pay (counting dividends) for $20,000 of life insurance. And such savings invested in growth stocks would amount (with the re-investment of dividends) to $7,000-$10,000 in 10 years.

I would suggest that every taxpayer reading these lines whose economic fortunes are inseparably connected with governmental spending write his Congressman and his Senator voicing the hope that his representatives in Washington do everything in their power to lift the tax load off his shoulders.

As I have recently stated in this column, tax savings all along the line can give a tremendous economic stimulus to prosperity. In the Senate and the House of Representatives there are able leaders in both parties who thoroughly understand that great good can result from federal economies and tax reductions.

The measures along these lines now being considered in Washington are most cheering. It is possible that, with their passage, America will come into one of her most dynamic periods of prosperity.

(Q)—"In recent years I bought 100 General Motors and 100 General Electric for less than $10,000 (inherited money). General Motors has been split two for one and General Electric three for one. My original investment is now worth $26,000.

"There is a $12,000 mortgage on my suburban home. Would you take some profits and pay off the mortgage?"

(A)—Without sufficient information on your financial position, I would say 'Yes' enthusiastically. Profits are glorious assets to take in paying off debts.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

One Bad Play Leads To Bridge Disaster

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

South couldn't open today's hand with a bid of two no-trump, since that would show 22 to 24 points with all suits stopped. South had only 21 points, and the spade suit was very much unstopped.

When North could respond with one spade, however, South had to come out from behind the bushes. North could be counted on for a spade stopper with a count of at least 6 points. Hence all suits would be safely stopped and the combined count would be at least enough for game. South's energetic leap to three no-trump showed his immense strength.

The contract was quite reasonable, but South should have been defeated. He made his contract because East is the sort of player who likes to trust to his instinct rather than to scientific play.

West led the jack of diamonds, and South won and led a spade to dummy's king. West played the six of spades, and East very properly held off. Declarer successfully finessed the queen of clubs and led his other spade towards dummy's queen. West followed suit with the eight of spades, and East consulted his instinct once again.

It was a bad day for instinct, or perhaps the wind was blowing from the wrong direction. At any rate, East held up his ace a second time. This was a serious mistake.

South took a second club finesse and then clanked down the ace of clubs. He wound up with ten tricks: four clubs, three diamonds, two spades and one heart.

If East had been scientific, he would have known that West held three spades and that South could therefore hold only two. (If West had two or four spades, he would play the eight first and then the six. His actual play of the six first and then the eight of spades showed that he had exactly three cards in that suit.)

If East had known this, he would have taken the second round of spades with his ace. South would make only one spade trick and would have to give up a club trick sooner or later. He would therefore win only eight tricks, for a one-trick set.

Hiding the Bottle

By FRANK TRIPP

Anybody who is tilting a bottle that he has to hide might better give up the habit; but such a one is always the last to swear off. They're cute about it too, and pretty hard to catch.

My last job before I went newspapering was managing a miniature railroad in a summer park, the Little Giant Railroad. The steam locomotive, and the ten little cars of two passengers each, when coupled together made a train about 80 feet long.

There was a tunnel on the "scenic nickel ride," built against a hill like a lean-to shed and covered with boughs to create the deception. Basically it wasn't for scenery; it was the night shelter and winter quarters for the little train.

Running the engine made a dandy summer job for a superannuated locomotive engineer. The one we hired had pulled the Lackawanna Limited in his day and proved ideal, except for one thing.

EVERY FEW DAYS by mid-afternoon lovable old Terry would begin to get groggy and by night several times I had to take over his job. Which I enjoyed, except that as general manager, general passenger agent, ticket seller, conductor and also engineer, I was busier than the president of the Union Pacific.

There was no license in the park and where Terry hid his bottle proved a puzzler. We knew he brought it in, so searched his dinner bucket, looked under the coal in the engine tender and in its water tank to no avail.

His pockets never bulged, yet the sneaking approach of his cozy little brannigan indicated well spaced nips rather than four-finger slugs.

FINALLY we found it. When he came to work Terry hid a quart at one end of the tunnel, where he could reach it from his seat. While passing through the darkness, which he did slowly, he had time for his snifter. Then he would deposit the bottle at the other end of the tunnel. Returning he would reverse the process, which gave him two shots per trip.

The extent of Terry's jag and the hour of its arrival depended upon the rush of business; the busier we were, the sooner he went loco. That's how I came to be demoted from general manager to engineer—and loved it.

MY MOTHER had an uncle who came out of the Civil War much worse for wear, as so many did. If he ever worked a solid month thereafter we didn't know it. He moved from relative to relative, brought all of his faults with him, but was welcomed just the same, for he was a comical old fellow, and smart.

Except that mother was an ardent white ribboner and Uncle Martin was anything else but, he probably would have availed himself of our hospitality more often. Nothing could completely cramp his style, however.

Vitamins were as yet unmarketed. Their equivalents were a host of patent medicine tonics for this and that. Mom was a tonic fall guy and had her favorite.

Uncle Mart would sample anything liquid, from kerosene to shellac, if in a bottle. So he tried mom's tonic, first the modest dosage recommended, then a tumblerful—and he passed out.

THE OVERDOSE sore distressed mother. She felt responsible and called a doctor. The doc took one look each at Uncle Mart and the bottle, folded his satchel and departed, saying: "He'll be all right; he's just crocked."

The tonic maker lost a good customer. Mom never touched his elixir again. Uncle Mart snitched three of the empty bottles and when pop caught him refilling them with Squirrel Whiskey, our resourceful uncle just winked and said, "These'll come in handy when I visit Marietta."

Marietta was his sister, so absolutely arid that, compared to her, my white-ribbon mother was a hopeless souse.

Fire Ruins Factory

New York, June 1 (AP)—A four-alarm fire roared through a two-story paint factory near Yankee Stadium in the Bronx yesterday, destroying a smaller adjoining factory and damaging a frame house. Fire Chief Peter Loftus said the blaze apparently was caused by an explosion, possibly of paint fumes, in the Allied Paint and Color Works at 3648 Park avenue. The fire quickly spread to a smaller building occupied by the Feurer Emblem Works. Both buildings were gutted. A two-story frame house at 3644 Park avenue was damaged slightly. No one was home at the time.

Hiding the Bottle

By FRANK TRIPP

Anybody who is tilting a bottle that he has to hide might better give up the habit; but such a one is always the last to swear off. They're cute about it too, and pretty hard to catch.

My last job before I went newspapering was managing a miniature railroad in a summer park, the Little Giant Railroad. The steam locomotive, and the ten little cars of two passengers each, when coupled together made a train about 80 feet long.

There was a tunnel on the "scenic nickel ride," built against a hill like a lean-to shed and covered with boughs to create the deception. Basically it wasn't for scenery; it was the night shelter and winter quarters for the little train.

Running the engine made a dandy summer job for a superannuated locomotive engineer. The one we hired had pulled the Lackawanna Limited in his day and proved ideal, except for one thing.

EVERY FEW DAYS by mid-afternoon lovable old Terry would begin to get groggy and by night several times I had to take over his job. Which I enjoyed, except that as general manager, general passenger agent, ticket seller, conductor and also engineer, I was busier than the president of the Union Pacific.

There was no license in the park and where Terry hid his bottle proved a puzzler. We knew he brought it in, so searched his dinner bucket, looked under the coal in the engine tender and in its water tank to no avail.

His pockets never bulged, yet the sneaking approach of his cozy little brannigan indicated well spaced nips rather than four-finger slugs.

FINALLY we found it. When he came to work Terry hid a quart at one end of the tunnel, where he could reach it from his seat. While passing through the darkness, which he did slowly, he had time for his snifter. Then he would deposit the bottle at the other end of the tunnel. Returning he would reverse the process, which gave him two shots per trip.

The extent of Terry's jag and the hour of its arrival depended upon the rush of business; the busier we were, the sooner he went loco. That's how I came to be demoted from general manager to engineer—and loved it.

MY MOTHER had an uncle who came out of the Civil War much worse for wear, as so many did. If he ever worked a solid month thereafter we didn't know it. He moved from relative to relative, brought all of his faults with him, but was welcomed just the same, for he was a comical old fellow, and smart.

Except that mother was an ardent white ribboner and Uncle Martin was anything else but, he probably would have availed himself of our hospitality more often. Nothing could completely cramp his style, however.

Vitamins were as yet unmarketed. Their equivalents were a host of patent medicine tonics for this and that. Mom was a tonic fall guy and had her favorite.

Uncle Mart would sample anything liquid, from kerosene to shellac, if in a bottle. So he tried mom's tonic, first the modest dosage recommended, then a tumblerful—and he passed out.

THE OVERDOSE sore distressed mother. She felt responsible and called a doctor. The doc took one look each at Uncle Mart and the bottle, folded his satchel and departed, saying: "He'll be all right; he's just crocked."

The tonic maker lost a good customer. Mom never touched his elixir again. Uncle Mart snitched three of the empty bottles and when pop caught him refilling them with Squirrel Whiskey, our resourceful uncle just winked and said, "These'll come in handy when I visit Marietta."

Marietta was his sister, so absolutely arid that, compared to her, my white-ribbon mother was a hopeless souse.

Fire Ruins Factory

New York, June 1 (AP)—A four-alarm fire roared through a two-story paint factory near Yankee Stadium in the Bronx yesterday, destroying a smaller adjoining factory and damaging a frame house. Fire Chief Peter Lottus said the blaze apparently was caused by an explosion, possibly of paint fumes, in the Allied Paint and Color Works at 3648 Park avenue. The fire quickly spread to a smaller building occupied by the Feurer Emblem Works. Both buildings were gutted. A two-story frame house at 3644 Park avenue was damaged slightly. No one was home at the time.

Kingston High School News

(Items in this column have been written by the Journalism Club.)

Musicians Rate High

Kingston High School's Band and Orchestra received both top ratings and high critical praise on their recent trip to Mohawk, where they entered the state sectional competition with other schools from the eastern and central New York area.

For the first time in the history of the high school, the band, under the direction of Marlin Morrette, played grade six music, the highest and most difficult in the State Music Association manual. The three numbers played in competition included Egmont overture by Beethoven; Marche Slave by Tschaikowsky and Sousa's Stars and Stripes Forever. The judges awarded the KHS Band a B rating on its performance of these three numbers.

The local school orchestra, under the direction of Harold Weaver, received an A rating, highest award in competition. They played grade four music. The selections included A Little Night Music by Mozart for their string number and Russian Sailors' Dance by Gliere for the full orchestra selection. The third number entered in competition was the Rosamunde overture by Schubert, chosen for them by the judges from a selected list.

Another "first" achieved by the Kingston group was having a student conduct the band in one of its selections. Robert Weisman, second chair solo cornet, led the band during its rendition of Marche Slave. Mr. Weisman, who has received much inspiration from Robert Craft, local musician, who is becoming internationally known for his conducting of Stravinsky, was given many compliments for his fine job.

Eight individual members of the band and orchestra also entered last week's competition as soloists, all of them receiving A ratings. Those who earned top solo ratings were Henry Ketterer, drums; Betsy Milliken, flute; Lee Harrington, oboe; Brian Fennelly and Bert Bishop, piano, and Peter Cain and Henry Ketterer, drum duet.

Aside from favorable musical comments, members of both music groups received praise for their conduct and manners from the school administrators at Mohawk, who said that the Kingston students were the most polite and considerate of all the students attending the school for competition.

Although the distance traveled was considerable, both Mr. Morrette and Mr. Weaver considered the trip worthwhile. Besides getting the opinion of experienced judges, the students had an opportunity to observe organizations and soloists from other schools.

Debaters Split

It was hard going for negative teams arguing the question of Hawaii's admission to the union. When final tallies were checked, it was found that affirmative teams had scored a sweeping victory, with all losses credited to the negative side.

The debate, held with Poughkeepsie High School, at the Bridge City Tuesday afternoon, was in the nature of a practice session for underclass debaters.

Lorraine Etienne, Lee Gershuny and John Snyder upheld the affirmative for Kingston, while Mary Whitford, Carol Engert and Clifford Terry supported the negative. Mr. Terry, Mr. Snyder and Miss Hull accompanied the teams.

Radio Class Play

The KHS radio class under the direction of Mrs. Anne McNelis, presented a farce of the 15th century on WKNY Thursday from 9:30-10 p. m.

The name of the play was Master Pierre Patelin and the cast of characters included: Robert Read, Lillian Saccoman, Ronald Marks, Donald Gregory and Joel Brink. The technician was Richard English and the announcer, Grace Bruno.

The French Honor Society held its annual election of officers May 18. The following students were elected as officers; chosen to carry on the club's activities for next year:

President Robert Burns and Secretary-Treasurer, Sande Gallate. Other officers will be elected in the fall, after new members have joined the organization.

Campaign Standoff

Whittier, Calif. (AP) — Edwin Johnsen, a city council candidate, rang the doorbell at the home of Charles Pollak to give a campaign talk about himself and to talk against a proposed new city charter. "Are you telling all these things against the charter to all the voters in this area?" asked Pollak. "You bet I am," Johnsen replied. Johnsen finished his talk. Pollak thanked him and closed the door. Pollak got his coat and hat and followed candidate Johnsen from house to house. While Johnsen talked, Pollak waited on the sidewalk. Then Pollak rang the bell and talked in favor of the charter. Election results: Johnsen lost. The charter won.

The service will be followed by an informal reception for the bishop in the Guild Hall of the church.

Blood Bank Call

New Paltz, June 1—Friday evening, from 7 to 10 local residents will answer the call for the Blood Bank. Since the community is rapidly increasing in population it is hoped that many more volunteers will answer this call to keep the bank "full." The place—municipal building.

Confirms 185 Persons

New Paltz, June 1—The Most Rev. Edward Dargin, auxiliary bishop of New York, administered the sacrament of Confirmation to 185 children and adults of this area in an impressive ceremony May 19 in St. Joseph's Church, New Paltz. The children and adults to be confirmed assembled in St. Joseph's School at 2:30 and proceeded to the church where the ceremony began at 3 o'clock.

Among those assisting Bishop Dargin in the sanctuary were the Rev. John H. Mahony, pastor, the Rev. Joseph Flannigan, pastor of the Highland Church and the Rev. Vincent Murly, pastor of the Rosendale Church.

Contest Scheduled For School Board

New Paltz, June 1—For the first time in many years this year's school board election will feature a contest between two candidates. It was announced this week that both John Schreiber and George Langwiick would seek the position on the local board left vacant by the resignation of Charles Moehrke.

Walter Dyer, recently appointed to complete the year in place of Moehrke, will seek the vacancy caused by the expiration of Dr. Virgil DeWitt's term. With a month still to go there is a possibility that other names will be submitted for the vacancies.

Elected to Society

New Paltz, June 1—John B. Shand of Wurts avenue has been elected a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, oldest national organization of engineers in the country.

Girl Scout Award Program Set June 6

New Paltz, May 29—The Girl Scout Annual Court of Awards will be held in the high school auditorium Sunday afternoon, June 6. Intermediate and senior Girl Scouts will receive badges they have earned during the past year. Mrs. Willett Porter is chairman.

The Girl Scout annual picnic, held Wednesday night at the Rod and Gun Club, was a success. About 200 Girl Scouts, Brownies, their families, leaders, and assistant leaders attended. After the picnic games were played.

The evening ended with group singing led by Mrs. William Heidgerd and closed with Day Is Done with the entire group in a circle.

Mrs. Robert Clarkson was chairman of the picnic and was assisted by Mrs. L. D. Campbell, president of the New Paltz Girl Scout Association.

Campus News

New Paltz, May 29—Miss June Tompkins' second grade pupils have been making a special study of the sea, and the fish and animals that live in it. The class made an aquarium of small fish, coral and sponge.

Susan Phillips shared a birthday party with her classmates at school with refreshments, favors and a movie her mother showed, portraying the class assembly of March.

Children of Mrs. Mary Jane Jewett's class enjoyed two trips recently to railroad stations in New Paltz and Poughkeepsie.

At the New Paltz station they were shown the office of Witkowski and had the thrill of hearing men talking on the loudspeaker from other stations. While the class was there, some rabbits were brought in to be sent by freight and the children saw them weighed for freight travel.

The climax of the New Paltz visit came with the announcement on the loudspeaker from Rosendale that the freight train was approaching New Paltz. Upon the arrival of the train, the engineer permitted the children to go inside his Diesel engine and the caboose. The brakeman showed them how to switch the tracks, and also how the signals work.

On their trip to Poughkeepsie, Mr. Cleary, a railroad detective, took them around the station. Among the things they saw were railroad torpedoes. In the B-Liner, they saw four berths in the caboose, the turn-table in action, and they rode in the freight elevator.

Assisting Mrs. Jewett on the second trip were Dr. George Thomas, Mrs. Xan Green, and Mrs. Preston Bennett. The children appreciated the courtesy of the railroad men.

Visit Print Class

On Monday, May 17, Mrs. Eileen Compton's fifth grade pupils went on a trip to Wappingers Falls. The main purpose of this trip was to visit and tour Hand Prints, Inc., to see how tablecloths are printed. However, when the children arrived there they discovered that towels, napkins, sheets, and pillowcases, baby blankets, dish towels, and place mats also are printed there.

Ralph Buchanan, father of one of the members of the class, took them to the sample room first, where he showed them all these things which are printed in many beautiful colors. He also told them about the plant. Their next stop was an immense room where they watched the men print the tablecloths by a method called "screening." Another interesting process the children watched was the aging machine where the cloth is washed with an acid solution, which makes the color come out brighter and keeps the color from running. This process will soon be replaced by a new machine which will do the same job, even better.

In another building the children saw where the articles are washed and hemmed. First, huge rolls of materials are put into clear cold water, then into hot, soapy water. After a thorough rinsing, they are spun dried, put through a stretching machine, and then sent to the hemming department to be cut and hemmed. They are then ironed and are ready to be shipped to stores.

After this tour the children were driven to Norrie Park where they enjoyed an outdoor lunch and a walk through the woods along the Hudson river.

"LET THE CAT OUT OF THE BAG"

When you give away a secret, you "let the cat out of the bag." The expression goes back to country fairs where baby pigs were often auctioned off. The little pigs were given to the buyer already wrapped in bags. But sharpsters sometimes substituted a cat for the pig. Thus, anyone giving away this secret, "let the cat out of the bag."

Six New Members Join C of C Group

Saugerties, June 1—David Halpert and Robert Shapiro were designated co-chairmen of the Chamber of Commerce finance committee for the July 4 observance which the local merchants group will co-sponsor with the Saugerties Memorial Post 5034, VFW.

Six new members were accepted at a recent meeting. They were Frank Costello, owner of the Flamingo Restaurant; Mr. and Mrs. William Eyth, owners of the Katsbaan Inn; Michael A. Gallietta, local funeral director; Dr. Grant D. Morse, superintendent of schools; and George L. Kerbert, local plumbing contractor.

The local chamber voted to increase the appropriations for resort advertising in metropolitan newspapers from $100 to $200. They also voted to make available two $10 prizes to be awarded at the Saugerties High School graduation exercises.

Incorporation Papers Filed for Firemen

Saugerties, June 1—The Malden-West Camp Fire Company was notified last week by Attorney Robert L. Carnright of Shirmer and Carnright that a Certificate of Incorporation had been filed and that the company would hereafter be known officially as the Malden-West Camp Fire Company Inc.

Officers named as directors on the incorporation papers were Charles J. Graf, president; Jerry A. Smith, vice-president; Warren H. Knaust, treasurer; and Albert J. Cawein, recording secretary.

Official notification that the newly-formed company was now incorporated served as a signal for immediate action. A parcel of land which was deeded to officers of the company was immediately transferred to the corporation. This parcel was donated for the use of the company by Mr. and Mrs. John J. Helfert of Malden-on-Hudson.

Action was also taken to accept title to another parcel of land which was donated this week by Mrs. Arline Cody Schirmer and her son, Livingston A. Cody both of Malden-on-Hudson. This parcel located 100 feet from the Helfert grant, measures 70 by 140 feet with a 70 foot front on Malden Turnpike. It is the intention of the fire company to use one parcel for the firehouse site and the adjacent property which is located across the highway 100 foot distance as a parking and drill area. Action has also been taken to acquire title to the rock cut site for the West Camp firehouse and confirmation of the transfer to the corporation is expected shortly.

Pioneer in Creative Dramatics for Youth Addresses Clubs Here

MISS OLEDA SCHROTTKY

By MARIANNE DAVIS
Freeman Society Editor

Miss Oleda Schrottky, dramatic consultant on the National Staff of Girl Scouts of the U. S. A., describes herself as one of the pioneers in creative dramatics for youth. Interviewed last week following her address to the Kiwanis Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel, Miss Schrottky said, "I was won over to begin the drama department for Girl Scouts many years ago when I was appearing with the Provincetown Players."

This important phase of scouting, one of 12 fields of interests for girls, is a life work for Miss Schrottky, who travels throughout the country lecturing and until recently, working through leaders to establish dramatic groups in all communities. Mrs. Kenneth Martin, active in scouting, hostess to the visitors, agreed fully.

Discipline of Theatre

"I strive always to establish the discipline of theatre for children," said Miss Schrottky, and went on to win full favor from her interviewer by adding, "And I firmly believe in the combination of music, drama and dancing for all presentations."

The charming drama expert of firm convictions said, "There's too much, Let George Do It, in the attitude of youngsters and adults alike. I believe that each individual should make his contribution to the carrying out of a purpose, whether it be a cookie sale, handcraft exhibit, or a theatrical performance."

Wanting every scout to participate in the programs, Miss Schrottky sees opportunity for talent in puppetry and scene building as well as acting or dancing. A heavy emphasis on the classic drama, and appreciation of drama for the older girls, as well as courses suggesting their conduct as a audience, are several of the consultant's pet projects.

Costumes Used for Month

An innovation, which might cause astonishment in amateur theatrical circles where dress rehearsal is the first the cast comes face to face with costumes, is her insistence that costumes be worn an entire month before production. "It's like vegetable soup simmering on the back of the stove. If you're like me, you have to wear a dress a few times to get the "feel" of it. So just imagine youngsters tripping over unfamiliar costumes while trying to give lines."

Choral speaking provides an outlet for the intermediate who is unsure of herself "and has feet and hands too big for her to handle gracefully just yet."

A gigantic project involving over 2,000 scouts in Buffalo several years ago, taking two years to complete, was a pageant, Great Gifts, written by Miss Schrottky. "We used students from the University of Buffalo to teach the girls modern dance, had the Buffalo Symphony Orchestra to play the performance, and performed before 6,000 persons." Miss Schrottky told of water carriers, Indians, and unusual Colonial scene in red and black. Girl Scouts did everything for the production including painting bowls and backdrops.

Reviews Current Films

Reasons why youngsters readily work with Miss Schrottky were apparent as she dramatized the story of an original Cinderella script emerging from conferences with young scouts. "We wanted to find out what made Cinderella beautiful without simpering and what made the sisters ugly without making their faces ugly," and came out with some mature ideas on character development.

Working with 10 year-olds and up, pantomine and preferably speaking versions of everyday situations dramatize everything from introducing Great Aunt Nellie to setting a table. "I try to bring the work down to things that children can understand." And she demonstrated with facial expressions how she quizzes them on "What kind of a dog am I walking down Fifth avenue now?"

Suggesting books and programs to leaders takes up a great deal of her travel time across the U. S. When asked, "Will you take the summer off?" Miss Schrottky assumed a shocked expression.

"I only wish it were so. But I have to spend the entire summer in New York reviewing films for the National Movie Review Board representing Girl Scouting," answered Miss Schrottky.

Viewing three films a day, going to her home to write the review, returning to discuss at a later date the composite of a composite of her review and that of two others, will be her summer schedule. A member of Delta Gamma sorority, she had much to say on the subject of the controversial film, Take Care of My Little Girl.

Heart Stronger Than Bomb

Members of AAUW, Jewish and Catholic as well as Protestant organizations, make up the 30 member board of review—not censorship, as Miss Schrottky pointed out. Their combined opinions go into Estimates Agree, issued bimonthly and available for groups from National Motion Picture Corporation of America, 28 West 44th street, New York.

Accompanied by Miss Frances Morse, a Girl Scout National Staff, who returned to the Governor Clinton Hotel after a trip to Milton Thursday afternoon, Miss Schrottky also spoke Thursday evening at Marbletown Central School to an assemblage of adult scouts and interested persons.

The former Mt. Holyoke faculty member left the Kiwanians with a cheerful message, embodying much of her own philosophy about Girl Scouting and the place of dramatics. She asserted that there is too much "synthetic experience" these days with TV and the movies, and urges more active participation in entertainment. Wanting youngsters to "find their own resources in themselves," she concluded with the statement, "the human heart, if properly educated, is stronger than the atomic bomb."

Good Taste Today

By EMILY POST

(Author of Etiquette, Children Are People, etc.)

IT CAN'T BE DONE

A letter this morning tells me: "My husband has been asked to be the best man at a friend's wedding. He would like to give a stag party for the bridegroom-to-be. Since we are of moderate means and this will be quite a strain on us financially, we are wondering if it would be possible to ask the men to bring their own liquor to the party. My husband does not drink but most of the other men do."

If your husband is unable to give the party completely, then it would be best not to give it at all. He can't possibly invite guests to a party and then ask them to supply any part of its hospitality.

Mourning For Fiance

Dear Mrs. Post: My fiance died two weeks ago from injuries received in an automobile accident. At the wake, and also at the funeral, I of course wore black. I would like to know if I should continue to wear black, and if so, for how long? I also would like to know if I should now change my engagement ring from my left to my right hand. Your help in this matter will be much appreciated.

Answer: It is entirely a question of your own feeling. It would be correct to wear black for, at shortest time, six months. As for your ring, there is no reason why you should change it from your left to your right hand, unless you think you will feel less sad if you do so.

Belated Wedding Announcements

Dear Mrs. Post: I have just recently remarried after having been a widow for ten years. Most of our close friends know of the marriage, but for personal reasons we have made no public announcement of any sort. Very soon we will be leaving on a belated honeymoon and I would like to send out announcements to everyone at that time. I would like to know if announcements should be sent to those who already know of our marriage.

Answer: It is certainly not necessary to send announcements to those whom you have told personally of your marriage. It would be better, however, to send an unnecessary duplicate than to risk sending none.

Pioneer in Creative Dramatics for Youth Addresses Clubs Here

MISS OLEDA SCHROTTKY

By MARIANNE DAVIS
Freeman Society Editor

Miss Oleda Schrottky, dramatic consultant on the National Staff of Girl Scouts of the U. S. A., describes herself as one of the pioneers in creative dramatics for youth. Interviewed last week following her address to the Kiwanis Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel, Miss Schrottky said, "I was won over to begin the drama department for Girl Scouts many years ago when I was appearing with the Provincetown Players."

This important phase of scouting, one of 12 fields of interests for girls, is a life work for Miss Schrottky, who travels throughout the country lecturing and until recently, working through leaders to establish dramatic groups in all communities. Mrs. Kenneth Martin, active in scouting, hostess to the visitors, agreed fully.

Discipline of Theatre

"I strive always to establish the discipline of theatre for children," said Miss Schrottky, and went on to win full favor from her interviewer by adding, "And I firmly believe in the combination of music, drama and dancing for all presentations."

The charming drama expert of firm convictions said, "There's too much, Let George Do It, in the attitude of youngsters and adults alike. I believe that each individual should make his contribution to the carrying out of a purpose, whether it be a cookie sale, handcraft exhibit, or a theatrical performance."

Wanting every scout to participate in the programs, Miss Schrottky sees opportunity for talent in puppetry and scene building as well as acting or dancing. A heavy emphasis on the classic drama, and appreciation of drama for the older girls, as well as courses suggesting their conduct as a audience, are several of the consultant's pet projects.

Costumes Used for Month

An innovation, which might cause astonishment in amateur theatrical circles where dress rehearsal is the first the cast comes face to face with costumes, is her insistence that costumes be worn an entire month before production. "It's like vegetable soup simmering on the back of the stove. If you're like me, you have to wear a dress a few times to get the "feel" of it. So just imagine youngsters tripping over unfamiliar costumes while trying to give lines."

Choral speaking provides an outlet for the intermediate who is unsure of herself "and has feet and hands too big for her to handle gracefully just yet."

A gigantic project involving over 2,000 scouts in Buffalo several years ago, taking two years to complete, was a pageant, Great Gifts, written by Miss Schrottky. "We used students from the University of Buffalo to teach the girls modern dance, had the Buffalo Symphony Orchestra to play the performance, and performed before 6,000 persons." Miss Schrottky told of water carriers, Indians, and unusual Colonial scene in red and black. Girl Scouts did everything for the production including painting bowls and backdrops.

Reviews Current Films

Reasons why youngsters readily work with Miss Schrottky were apparent as she dramatized the story of an original Cinderella script emerging from conferences with young scouts. "We wanted to find out what made Cinderella beautiful without simpering and what made the sisters ugly without making their faces ugly," and came out with some mature ideas on character development.

Working with 10 year-olds and up, pantomine and preferably speaking versions of everyday situations dramatize everything from introducing Great Aunt Nellie to setting a table. "I try to bring the work down to things that children can understand." And she demonstrated with facial expressions how she quizzes them on "What kind of a dog am I walking down Fifth avenue now?"

Suggesting books and programs to leaders takes up a great deal of her travel time across the U. S. When asked, "Will you take the summer off?" Miss Schrottky assumed a shocked expression.

"I only wish it were so. But I have to spend the entire summer in New York reviewing films for the National Movie Review Board representing Girl Scouting," answered Miss Schrottky.

Viewing three films a day, going to her home to write the review, returning to discuss at a later date the composite of a composite of her review and that of two others, will be her summer schedule. A member of Delta Gamma sorority, she had much to say on the subject of the controversial film, Take Care of My Little Girl.

Heart Stronger Than Bomb

Members of AAUW, Jewish and Catholic as well as Protestant organizations, make up the 30 member board of review—not censorship, as Miss Schrottky pointed out. Their combined opinions go into Estimates Agree, issued bimonthly and available for groups from National Motion Picture Corporation of America, 28 West 44th street, New York.

Accompanied by Miss Frances Morse, a Girl Scout National Staff, who returned to the Governor Clinton Hotel after a trip to Milton Thursday afternoon, Miss Schrottky also spoke Thursday evening at Marbletown Central School to an assemblage of adult scouts and interested persons.

The former Mt. Holyoke faculty member left the Kiwanians with a cheerful message, embodying much of her own philosophy about Girl Scouting and the place of dramatics. She asserted that there is too much "synthetic experience" these days with TV and the movies, and urges more active participation in entertainment. Wanting youngsters to "find their own resources in themselves," she concluded with the statement, "the human heart, if properly educated, is stronger than the atomic bomb."

IT CAN'T BE DONE

A letter this morning tells me: "My husband has been asked to be the best man at a friend's wedding. He would like to give a stag party for the bridegroom-to-be. Since we are of moderate means and this will be quite a strain on us financially, we are wondering if it would be possible to ask the men to bring their own liquor to the party. My husband does not drink but most of the other men do."

If your husband is unable to give the party completely, then it would be best not to give it at all. He can't possibly invite guests to a party and then ask them to supply any part of its hospitality.

County SPCA Will Sponsor Auction To Benefit Shelter

"Care to provide an adequate shelter for stray cats and dogs and other animals?" asked Miss Madelyn Schumacher of the Ulster County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. "You can help equip the Shelter on the Brabrant Road merely by donating unwanted articles, such as old clothing, household goods, even used furniture, to the SPCA auction."

This auction will be held in June, with all proceeds for the benefit of the new Shelter supported by the SPCA. Collections of donated articles are now being made under the supervision of Ray Winne of Brabrant Road.

Anyone wishing to help the program to take care of stray and unwanted animals may contact Mr. Winne who will arrange the pickup of articles. Mrs. J. Addison Freer may also be contacted by donors.

"Remember," said Miss Schumacher," your unwanted articles will provide care for unwanted animals."

County SPCA Will Sponsor Auction To Benefit Shelter

"Care to provide an adequate shelter for stray cats and dogs and other animals?" asked Miss Madelyn Schumacher of the Ulster County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. "You can help equip the Shelter on the Brabrant Road merely by donating unwanted articles, such as old clothing, household goods, even used furniture, to the SPCA auction."

This auction will be held in June, with all proceeds for the benefit of the new Shelter supported by the SPCA. Collections of donated articles are now being made under the supervision of Ray Winne of Brabrant Road.

Anyone wishing to help the program to take care of stray and unwanted animals may contact Mr. Winne who will arrange the pickup of articles. Mrs. J. Addison Freer may also be contacted by donors.

"Remember," said Miss Schumacher," your unwanted articles will provide care for unwanted animals."

Home Stand Decides Bosox Fate; Indians Hold Lead in American

By BEN PHLEGAR
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The next 30 days should decide the fate of Boston in the 1954 American League race. Will the Red Sox bloom in June or are they doomed to second division?

After a horrible spring of injuries and bad weather forced Lou Boudreau to go with a make-do lineup that didn't, the new month finds the Red Sox settling in for a 18-game home stand in friendly Fenway Park.

They own a three-game winning streak for the first time this season. They've gotten route-going performances from their pitchers in two of their last three contests. And Ted Williams apparently is ready to start bustin' out all over after being back in action for two weeks.

Win Doubleheader

Boston was the only club in either league to sweep a Memorial Day doubleheader yesterday and the Red Sox did it in high style. They buried Philadelphia 20-10 in the highest scoring display of the league season, then mopped up 9-0 in the nightcap.

The Cleveland Indians stayed a game ahead of Chicago in first place by whipping the White Sox 6-3 on Jim Hegan's eighth inning home run after losing the opener 6-4 as Bob Keegan posted his seventh victory in eight decisions.

Washington Senators, who cause the New York Yankees more trouble than an investigating committee, beat the world champion 1-0 on Johnny Schmitz' three-hitter and pushed the second game into extra innings before bowing 7-6 in 10 as Spec Shea forced home the winning run with a bases-loaded walk.

Detroit rallied in the ninth for a 7-5 victory at Baltimore, then lost 4-2 to the Orioles.

In the National League rain cut short the holiday festivities, washing out Cincinnati's doubleheader with the first place Milwaukee Braves and cutting the Chicago-St. Louis twin bill to a single seven-inning contest won by the Cubs 14-4 on six home runs, two by Hank Sauer.

Brooklyn bested Philadelphia 5-4 on Gil Hodges' 12th-inning home run in a single game. Pittsburgh split with the New York Giants, winning 4-3 after losing on three hits to Ruben Gomez 4-0.

Have Big Day

The Red Sox' big day included 27 hits, five of them home runs. Milt Bolling hit two. Williams, Jim Piersall and Harry Agganis got one each. Williams also got a double and a single in six official times at bat and now is hitting .408.

Bill Henry scattered seven hits in the second game shutout, his third complete game of the year.

A bunt, an error, an infield out and Mickey Vernon's single produced the one run Washington needed to beat New York in the opener.

Baltimore outhit Detroit 14-9 in the first game but left 15 stranded. In the nightcap Vern Stephens' homer and triples by Jim Fridley and Sam Mele helped counteract 11 strikeouts by the Tigers' Billy Hoeft.

Stop Tribe Streak

The White Sox ended Cleveland's 14-game home winning streak in the curtain raiser with the help of two-run homers by Minnie Minoso and Ferris Fain. Hegan's home run broke a 3-3 tie in the second game.

The Phils threatened Brooklyn in the 12th, putting two aboard after two out. But Duke Snider raced up the center field wall and hauled down Willie Jones' tremendous drive for the final out.

Willie Mays of the Giants continued his hitting spree with his 14th home run in the first game at Pittsburgh. The lowly Pirates hopped on Hoyt Wilhelm for four singles in the ninth inning of the second game for the two runs they needed.

The mere sight of a St. Louis pitcher seems to incite the Cubs' hitters to riot. In eight games, of which they've won six, the Cubs have battered Cardinal hurlers for 105 hits including 20 home runs and have scored 86 runs.

SPORTS

By Charles J. Tiano
Sports Editor

• Our New Girl Friday:

Mary Ellen Christiana, a junior at Kerhonkson High School, may not be the only high school sports correspondent in the country. But she comes pretty close to being the best.

Miss Christiana, who admits being a rabid Dodger rooter, telephones the boxscores of the Kerhonkson High School games a couple times weekly. She has amazing perception and understanding of baseball, its cliches and jargon and does a brilliant job.

Miss Christiana would like to study chemical engineering. We think she'd be happier as a sports writer, mulling over boxscores instead of scientific formulas and symbols. Whatever she chooses, she can't miss.

• Flotsam and Jetsam:

In 25 years of sports reporting, we've used the verbs "blow over" and "overpower" time and again, too many times, but at long last we've discovered the sports figure to whom they most appropriately apply. Meaning, Thomas "Hurricane" Jackson, of course. Area semi-pro and independent baseball teams will be happy to learn that Margaretville has revived its town team after a three-year layoff. The manager is Gus McDonald. Montgomery has also announced plans for a town squad. Newburgh Academy's tennis streak has reached 41, with 29 straight under Coach Jack Fiedelholtz. The summer sports schedule will reach its peak on June 17, when Rocky Marciano and Ezzard Charles meet for the heavyweight title and the U. S. Open golf championship starts at Baltusrol, just across the Hudson in New Jersey.

• The Nineteenth Hole:

Clarence "Dubby" Raichle, an important assistant to the president and tournament chairman, is doing a nice job on the early phases of the Pro-Member tournament due in September. Harry Grayson, the hard-hitting NEA sports editor whose items grace these pages and his sidekick, Murray Olderman, have collaborated with Jimmy Demaret in a new golf book "My Partner, Ben Hogan." It is the inside story of the professional golf immortal, Ben Hogan, by the man who knows him best, Jimmy Demaret. Jimmy has known and played golf with Ben Hogan for 20 years and his book is alive with humorous anecdotes and fascinating insights into the golf world. Written by a man who admits to a 30-year lover affair with golf, it is a book sure to delight all admirers of Hogan and the game which made him famous.

Dick Overbagh claimed some sort of record when every member of the Twaalfskill tournament committee showed up for a recent luncheon meeting at the Kirkland. In line with a national trend, Twaalfskill has abandoned its Calcutta tournament. Many golf courses are now attacking the dragged-out, prolonged high-low matches. The emphasis should be on low ball only, with the lower ranking players in a foursome playing with a handicap. Scrambling to escape high ball losses drags out matches and wastes valuable time on courses already suffering from too much player pressure. Unless a foursome is evenly matched, the lower ranked players invariably become the patsies of the match.

Dudley Smith writes from State College, Pa., that he caddied for Gerry Wells, 1953 Wiltwyck champion, in a recent match between Penn State and Lehigh. Penn State won the match, 8-1, as Wells played No. 4 man against Warren Gittlen of Harrisburg, Pa., and lost on the 16th hole, 4 and 2. Gerry had a medal score of 73, Gittlen a 69, with an out-of-bounds ball but a 3-3-3 start (2 birdies). Smith says a red hot Wells putter left a lot of hangers. Gerry's record for the season is a solid 9 wins and 4 losses. Both of these young men will compete in the Herdegen Memorial later this month.

Golf Veteran on Spree

J. Van Gonsic Cards 69 In Twaalfskill Tourney

Former club champion, John J. Van Gonsic, was in top form for Twaalfskill's hoilday weekend competition.

The putting master carded the lowest medal for the three-day competition with a 69 on Saturday. He also captured Flag Day honors by placing his ball one inch from the 20th hole in Monday's tournament.

Maurice Hand matched par figures in the Saturday blind bogey sweepstakes and Alvin Boice carded 72 to lead the Sunday division.

Van Gonsic fired a three-under-par 32 for the back nine after opening with 37. Hand posted 36-34 for his 70 and Boice shot a pair of 36s for his 72.

Raichle Second

Clarence "Dubby" Raichle was second in the Flag Day play, landing in the 19th cup with his allotment of strokes.

Trailing the leaders in order were: Dr. Douw Meyers, 2 feet from 19th cup; Bob Herzog, 17 feet from 19th cup; Gus Modjeska and Reynolds Carr, 18 feet from 19th cup; Fabian Russell, 170 yards from 19th; Dr. Joseph Jacobson, 200 yards from 19th cup.

Ernie Schirmer and George Schneider landed in the 18th cup; Ed Remmert was a foot away, Gene Berardi two feet and Dr. Rodney Ball missed by six feet.

In close proximity to the 18th hole were Dick Wood 23 feet; Gene Freer 24 feet; Irving Eyles 26 feet and Louis R. Ntter 28 feet.

Gus Modjeska, Maurice Hand and Dr. Elbert F. MacFadden Jr., tied with low net 70s in the Saturday sweeps. Clary Buddenhagen netted 72 Sunday, with 78 medal and six handicap.

Vukovich Cops 2nd Straight '500' Classic at 130.84 MPH

Indianapolis, June 1 (AP)—Without taking any credit from a great driver in Bill Vukovich's second straight 500-mile auto race victory yesterdday, the cold statistics show that his pit crew deserves a big chunk of cash when the purse is distributed tonight.

Jack McGrath, who holds the Indianapolis Motor Speedway qualifying record, set out to run off from the field like Vukovich did last year. He was screaming around the track at an almost impossible 140 miles an hour early in the contest.

Vukovich won and McGrath finished in third place behind hard-driving Jimmy Bryan of Phoenix.

Vukovich was 1:09.59 ahead of Bryan and 1:57 ahead of McGrath.

Vukovich had made two pit stops for fuel and tires and his crew got him back on the track with a total loss of 1:42. Bryan had to make three stops and lost 2:04. McGrath stopped three times and lost 3:39, including once when his engine stalled.

Fresno friends of the short, dark and untalkative Vukovich probably will contend, with considerable reason, that if Vukovich hadn't held a full lap lead over Bryan late in the race, he would have been pushing his fuel injector special even faster than his new record of 130.840 MPH. He certainly wasn't loafing after starting in 19th place.

McGrath, another Californian from South Pasadena, had a phenomenal average speed of 139.860 for the first 50 miles and Bryan was hardly a car length behind him at that point.

Home Stand Decides Bosox Fate; Indians Hold Lead in American

By BEN PHLEGAR
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The next 30 days should decide the fate of Boston in the 1954 American League race. Will the Red Sox bloom in June or are they doomed to second division?

After a horrible spring of injuries and bad weather forced Lou Boudreau to go with a make-do lineup that didn't, the new month finds the Red Sox settling in for a 18-game home stand in friendly Fenway Park.

They own a three-game winning streak for the first time this season. They've gotten route-going performances from their pitchers in two of their last three contests. And Ted Williams apparently is ready to start bustin' out all over after being back in action for two weeks.

Win Doubleheader

Boston was the only club in either league to sweep a Memorial Day doubleheader yesterday and the Red Sox did it in high style. They buried Philadelphia 20-10 in the highest scoring display of the league season, then mopped up 9-0 in the nightcap.

The Cleveland Indians stayed a game ahead of Chicago in first place by whipping the White Sox 6-3 on Jim Hegan's eighth inning home run after losing the opener 6-4 as Bob Keegan posted his seventh victory in eight decisions.

Washington Senators, who cause the New York Yankees more trouble than an investigating committee, beat the world champion 1-0 on Johnny Schmitz' three-hitter and pushed the second game into extra innings before bowing 7-6 in 10 as Spec Shea forced home the winning run with a bases-loaded walk.

Detroit rallied in the ninth for a 7-5 victory at Baltimore, then lost 4-2 to the Orioles.

In the National League rain cut short the holiday festivities, washing out Cincinnati's doubleheader with the first place Milwaukee Braves and cutting the Chicago-St. Louis twin bill to a single seven-inning contest won by the Cubs 14-4 on six home runs, two by Hank Sauer.

Brooklyn bested Philadelphia 5-4 on Gil Hodges' 12th-inning home run in a single game. Pittsburgh split with the New York Giants, winning 4-3 after losing on three hits to Ruben Gomez 4-0.

Have Big Day

The Red Sox' big day included 27 hits, five of them home runs. Milt Bolling hit two. Williams, Jim Piersall and Harry Agganis got one each. Williams also got a double and a single in six official times at bat and now is hitting .408.

Bill Henry scattered seven hits in the second game shutout, his third complete game of the year.

A bunt, an error, an infield out and Mickey Vernon's single produced the one run Washington needed to beat New York in the opener.

Baltimore outhit Detroit 14-9 in the first game but left 15 stranded. In the nightcap Vern Stephens' homer and triples by Jim Fridley and Sam Mele helped counteract 11 strikeouts by the Tigers' Billy Hoeft.

Stop Tribe Streak

The White Sox ended Cleveland's 14-game home winning streak in the curtain raiser with the help of two-run homers by Minnie Minoso and Ferris Fain. Hegan's home run broke a 3-3 tie in the second game.

The Phils threatened Brooklyn in the 12th, putting two aboard after two out. But Duke Snider raced up the center field wall and hauled down Willie Jones' tremendous drive for the final out.

Willie Mays of the Giants continued his hitting spree with his 14th home run in the first game at Pittsburgh. The lowly Pirates hopped on Hoyt Wilhelm for four singles in the ninth inning of the second game for the two runs they needed.

The mere sight of a St. Louis pitcher seems to incite the Cubs' hitters to riot. In eight games, of which they've won six, the Cubs have battered Cardinal hurlers for 105 hits including 20 home runs and have scored 86 runs.

J. Van Gonsic Cards 69 In Twaalfskill Tourney

Former club champion, John J. Van Gonsic, was in top form for Twaalfskill's hoilday weekend competition.

The putting master carded the lowest medal for the three-day competition with a 69 on Saturday. He also captured Flag Day honors by placing his ball one inch from the 20th hole in Monday's tournament.

Maurice Hand matched par figures in the Saturday blind bogey sweepstakes and Alvin Boice carded 72 to lead the Sunday division.

Van Gonsic fired a three-under-par 32 for the back nine after opening with 37. Hand posted 36-34 for his 70 and Boice shot a pair of 36s for his 72.

Raichle Second

Clarence "Dubby" Raichle was second in the Flag Day play, landing in the 19th cup with his allotment of strokes.

SPORTS

By Charles J. Tiano
Sports Editor

• Our New Girl Friday:

Mary Ellen Christiana, a junior at Kerhonkson High School, may not be the only high school sports correspondent in the country. But she comes pretty close to being the best.

Miss Christiana, who admits being a rabid Dodger rooter, telephones the boxscores of the Kerhonkson High School games a couple times weekly. She has amazing perception and understanding of baseball, its cliches and jargon and does a brilliant job.

Miss Christiana would like to study chemical engineering. We think she'd be happier as a sports writer, mulling over boxscores instead of scientific formulas and symbols. Whatever she chooses, she can't miss.

• Flotsam and Jetsam:

In 25 years of sports reporting, we've used the verbs "blow over" and "overpower" time and again, too many times, but at long last we've discovered the sports figure to whom they most appropriately apply. Meaning, Thomas "Hurricane" Jackson, of course. Area semi-pro and independent baseball teams will be happy to learn that Margaretville has revived its town team after a three-year layoff. The manager is Gus McDonald. Montgomery has also announced plans for a town squad. Newburgh Academy's tennis streak has reached 41, with 29 straight under Coach Jack Fiedelholtz. The summer sports schedule will reach its peak on, June 17, when Rocky Marciano and Ezzard Charles meet for the heavyweight title and the U. S. Open golf championship starts at Baltusrol, just across the Hudson in New Jersey.

• The Nineteenth Hole:

Clarence "Dubby" Raichle, an important assistant to the president and tournament chairman, is doing a nice job on the early phases of the Pro-Member tournament due in September. Harry Grayson, the hard-hitting NEA sports editor whose items grace these pages and his sidekick, Murray Olderman, have collaborated with Jimmy Demaret in a new golf book "My Partner, Ben Hogan." It is the inside story of the professional golf immortal, Ben Hogan, by the man who knows him best, Jimmy Demaret. Jimmy has known and played golf with Ben Hogan for 20 years and his book is alive with humorous anecdotes and fascinating insights into the golf world. Written by a man who admits to a 30-year lover affair with golf, it is a book sure to delight all admirers of Hogan and the game which made him famous.

Dick Overbagh claimed some sort of record when every member of the Twaalfskill tournament committee showed up for a recent luncheon meeting at the Kirkland. In line with a national trend, Twaalfskill has abandoned its Calcutta tournament. Many golf courses are now attacking the dragged-out, prolonged high-low matches. The emphasis should be on low ball only, with the lower ranking players in a foursome playing with a handicap. Scrambling to escape high ball losses drags out matches and wastes valuable time on courses already suffering from too much player pressure. Unless a foursome is evenly matched, the lower ranked players invariably become the patsies of the match.

Dudley Smith writes from State College, Pa., that he caddied for Gerry Wells, 1953 Wiltwyck champion, in a recent match between Penn State and Lehigh. Penn State won the match, 8-1, as Wells played No. 4 man against Warren Gittlen of Harrisburg, Pa., and lost on the 16th hole, 4 and 2. Gerry had a medal score of 73, Gittlen a 69, with an out-of-bounds ball but a 3-3-3 start (2 birdies). Smith says a red hot Wells putter left a lot of hangers. Gerry's record for the season is a solid 9 wins and 4 losses. Both of these young men will compete in the Herdegen Memorial later this month.

Indianapolis, June 1 (AP)—Without taking any credit from a great driver in Bill Vukovich's second straight 500-mile race victory yesterday, the cold statistics show that his pit crew deserves a big chunk of cash when the purse is distributed tonight.

Jack McGrath, who holds the Indianapolis Motor Speedway qualifying record, set out to run off from the field like Vukovich did last year. He was screaming around the track at an almost impossible 140 miles an hour early in the contest.

Vukovich won and McGrath finished in third place behind hard-driving Jimmy Bryan of Phoenix.

Vukovich was 1:09.59 ahead of Bryan and 1:57 ahead of McGrath.

Vukovich had made two pit stops for fuel and tires and his crew got him back on the track with a total loss of 1:42. Bryan had to make three stops and lost 2:04. McGrath stopped three times and lost 3:39, including once when his engine stalled.

Fresno friends of the short, dark and untalkative Vukovich probably will contend, with considerable reason, that if Vukovich hadn't held a full lap lead over Bryan late in the race, he would have been pushing his fuel injector special even faster than his new record of 130.840 MPH. He certainly wasn't loafing after starting in 19th place.

McGrath, another Californian from South Pasadena, had a phenomenal average speed of 139.860 for the first 50 miles and Bryan was hardly a car length behind him at that point.

Vukovich Wins Indianapolis Race

Up Top Wins Race

Westbury, June 1 (AP)—Up Top, a three-year-old colt, was driven to victory by its owner, Ben Turlington of Melfa, Va., in the $2,500 old Westbury Pace last night at Roosevelt Raceway. In covering the mile in 2:05 for the fastest clocking of his career, the sophomore sidewheeler finished two lengths ahead of Trader Bedford, driven by Earl Avery. Third went to Black Haven, piloted by Bill Haughton. The return across the board on Up Top was $9.40, $4.90 and $3.50.

Catcher Carl Sawatski of the Chicago White Sox previously played for the Chicago Cubs. He was acquired on waivers last December.

Birdie Tebbetts, manager of the Cincinnati Redlegs, received his nickname because of his shrill voice.

My Greatest Shot

By LLOYD MANGRUM

Tam O'Shanter always has been my favorite course: I'm the head pro there. But one hole—the 18th—of the sprawling Chicago layout always has been my particular favorite.

That's because I made what I rate the best shot of my life on that hole. It came during the final round of the 1948 World Championship tournament. I had shot the first nine in 32 and took 29 shots to come up to the spot I was in on the 18th.

That spot was 25 yards away from the hole. My ball was a few feet out from the green, which was uphill. I needed a birdie to win the tournament right there—but was more concerned with getting the par I had to have to gain a tie.

I delivered for myself quite well—my chip heading right for the cup. It came down and rolled past it—as my heart gave a jump—and then stopped eight inches away. It was, I say, the best shot I've ever made. I canned the putt and earned a tie with Bobby Locke, the South African. I also broke the course record with my 63.

The next day I went out and beat Locke and I've always thought the chip shot gave me the impetus to do so.

Perez, Labua Winners In MondayBouts

New York, June 1 (AP)—Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champ from 1912 to 1923, rates Lulu Perez, current contender, "a very good boy who still has a lot to learn."

Grey-haired Johnny, now 65, watched the Flashy Brooklyn youth easily whip Cleveland's Mickey Mars last night on a unanimous decision after 10 fast rounds at St. Nicholas Arena.

"Both Lulu and Mars had better learn how to move," said Kilbane. "They're both too easy to hit. The only way to beat Perez is by leading."

Lulu breezed home as a 3 to 1 favorite should, 10-0 on the card of Referee Barney Felix, 9-1 from Judge Americo Schiavone and 8-2 from Judge Harold Barnes. The AP card was 9-1 for Perez.

In Brooklyn, the French stable of Jean Bretonnel finally was upset itself. Jacques Royer, who started the string of underdog victories for the stable, lost to Jackie Labua of East Meadows, N. Y. on a split decision after 10 rounds at Eastern Parkway.

Labua, a 22-year-old ex-sailor, got off fast and opened up a fash over Jacques' left eye in the third. He learned Royer's style by helping him get ready for his victory over Ralph (Tiger) Jones last month.

First Time in Hudson Valley

Marciano-Charles Bout On 9-W Drive-In Screen

Large screen television comes to the mid-Hudson valley area for the first time on Thursday, June 17 when the 9W Drive-In, presents the Rocky Marciano-Ezzard Charles World heavyweight title bout as it takes place at Yankee Stadium, the Walter Reade organization announced today.

The title bout will be blacked out on home television, and from all theatres within a 50-mile radius of New York. The 9W Drive-In will be the nearest location, north of New York, where the fight can be seen.

The 9W Drive-In will use a newly acquired General Precision Laboratory large-screen projection unit, mounted on a truck, which will project a picture 60 feet wide and 40 feet high, Joseph Sommers and Jack Keegan of the local Reade staff have announced.

More than 700 theatres in the United States will be serviced by Theatre Network Television for the big fight.

The drive-in, with special bleacher arrangement, expects to accommodate between 4800 and 4900 persons. There must be a minimum of four persons in each car.

There are no reserved seats.

Johnny Druze, Notre Dame end coach, was captain of the 1937 Fordham football team. He also played first base on the baseball squad. One of his diamond mates was Hank Borowy, who later pitched for the Yankees, Phillies and Cubs.

Rookie pitcher Bob Trice of the Athletics is known as a good hitter, too. He hit four homers and five doubles last season for Ottawa in the International League.

Vukovich Wins Indianapolis Race

Up Top Wins Race

Westbury, June 1 (AP)—Up Top, a three-year-old colt, was driven to victory by its owner, Ben Turlington of Melfa, Va., in the $2,500 old Westbury Pace last night at Roosevelt Raceway. In covering the mile in 2:05 for the fastest clocking of his career, the sophomore sidewheeler finished two lengths ahead of Trader Bedford, driven by Earl Avery. Third went to Black Haven, piloted by Bill Haughton. The return across the board on Up Top was $9.40, $4.90 and $3.50.

Catcher Carl Sawatski of the Chicago White Sox previously played for the Chicago Cubs. He was acquired on waivers last December.

Birdie Tebbetts, manager of the Cincinnati Redlegs, received his nickname because of his shrill voice.

My Greatest Shot

By LLOYD MANGRUM

Tam O'Shanter always has been my favorite course: I'm the head pro there. But one hole—the 18th—of the sprawling Chicago layout always has been my particular favorite.

That's because I made what I rate the best shot of my life on that hole. It came during the final round of the 1948 World Championship tournament. I had shot the first nine in 32 and took 29 shots to come up to the spot I was in on the 18th.

That spot was 25 yards away from the hole. My ball was a few feet out from the green, which was uphill. I needed a birdie to win the tournament right there—but was more concerned with getting the par I had to have to gain a tie.

I delivered for myself quite well—my chip heading right for the cup. It came down and rolled past it—as my heart gave a jump—and then stopped eight inches away. It was, I say, the best shot I've ever made. I canned the putt and earned a tie with Bobby Locke, the South African. I also broke the course record with my 63.

The next day I went out and beat Locke and I've always thought the chip shot gave me the impetus to do so.

Perez, Labua Winners In MondayBouts

New York, June 1 (AP)—Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champ from 1912 to 1923, rates Lulu Perez, current contender, "a very good boy who still has a lot to learn."

Grey-haired Johnny, now 65, watched the Flashy Brooklyn youth easily whip Cleveland's Mickey Mars last night on a unanimous decision after 10 fast rounds at St. Nicholas Arena.

"Both Lulu and Mars had better learn how to move," said Kilbane. "They're both too easy to hit. The only way to beat Perez is by leading."

Lulu breezed home as a 3 to 1 favorite should, 10-0 on the card of Referee Barney Felix, 9-1 from Judge Americo Schiavone and 8-2 from Judge Harold Barnes. The AP card was 9-1 for Perez.

In Brooklyn, the French stable of Jean Bretonnel finally was upset itself. Jacques Royer, who started the string of underdog victories for the stable, lost to Jackie Labua of East Meadows, N. Y. on a split decision after 10 rounds at Eastern Parkway.

Labua, a 22-year-old ex-sailor, got off fast and opened up a fash over Jacques' left eye in the third. He learned Royer's style by helping him get ready for his victory over Ralph (Tiger) Jones last month.

First Time in Hudson Valley

Marciano-Charles Bout On 9-W Drive-In Screen

Large screen television comes to the mid-Hudson valley area for the first time on Thursday, June 17 when the 9W Drive-In presents the Rocky Marciano-Ezzard Charles World heavyweight title bout as it takes place at Yankee Stadium, the Walter Reade organization announced today.

The title bout will be blacked out on home television, and from all theatres within a 50-mile radius of New York. The 9W Drive-In will be the nearest location, north of New York, where the fight can be seen.

The 9W Drive-In will use a newly acquired General Precision Laboratory large-screen projection unit, mounted on a truck, which will project a picture 60 feet wide and 40 feet high, Joseph Sommers and Jack Keegan of the local Reade staff have announced.

More than 700 theatres in the United States will be serviced by Theatre Network Television for the big fight.

The drive-in, with special bleacher arrangement, expects to accommodate between 4800 and 4900 persons. There must be a minimum of four persons in each car.

There are no reserved seats.

Johnny Druze, Notre Dame end coach, was captain of the 1937 Fordham football team. He also played first base on the baseball squad. One of his diamond mates was Hank Borowy, who later pitched for the Yankees, Phillies and Cubs.

Rookie pitcher Bob Trice of the Athletics is known as a good hitter, too. He hit four homers and five doubles last season for Ottawa in the International League.

Want Ad Drew Group That Laid Santa Fe Trail

AN ARTICLE for the government of a company of men destined to the westward for the purpose of trading horses and mules and catching wild animals of every description

Capt. William Becknell secured men to join him in an expedition through then Spanish territory in the Southwest by placing a Want Ad in the Missouri Intelligencer and Boone's Lick Advertiser of June 25, 1821. But instead of finding a cheap source of mules, the group blazed the famous Santa Fe Trail during their wanderings.

Want Ad Drew Group That Laid Santa Fe Trail

AN ARTICLE for the government of a company of men destined to the westward for the purpose of trading horses and mules and catching wild animals of every description

Capt. William Becknell secured men to join him in an expedition through then Spanish territory in the Southwest by placing a Want Ad in the Missouri Intelligencer and Boone's Lick Advertiser of June 25, 1821. But instead of finding a cheap source of mules, the group blazed the famous Santa Fe Trail during their wanderings.

Ring Champ Held After Man's Death

Albany, June 1 (AP)—A Golden Gloves boxing champ was free in $500 bail today pending grand jury action on a second-degree manslaughter charge stemming from the death of a 26-year-old man after a picnic fist fight.

Daniel J. Cira, 19, of Albany, winner of the 147-pound class title in an Adirondack AAU Golden Gloves tourney here last March, waived examination yesterday when arraigned before Peace Justice Harold W. White of Bethlehem.

State police said witnesses told them that Cira had punched Frank M. Drzewiecki of Albany at a high school picnic Saturday in nearby Thacher Park. Drzewiecki's head struck a car when he fell, and he was dead on arrival at a doctor's office in New Salem.

Witnesses reported, police said, that the older man had insulted a girl Cira had escorted to the picnic.

J. Gregory Nealon, an Albany county coroner, said the man had died from a brain injury.

Stadium Is

dium, General Hasbrouck also presented to Mr. and Mrs. George Norton, Sr., of 157 Hasbrouck avenue, a Silver Star which was awarded posthumously to Corporal Joseph Norton for gallantry in action near Sokkogea, Korea, on July 8, 1953. The award was accepted by the father in the presence of Capt. Wayne Reynolds.

The ceremonies at the stadium followed the parade from the high school to the stadium in which many local organizations took part. There were 11 divisions in the parade and it took nearly an hour for the parade to pass a given point. In line were 13 musician organizations.

Plaque Is Dedicated

Dedication of the plaque at the stadium in memory of Sgt. Dietz was done in the presence of local members of the Seventh Armored Division of which Sgt. Dietz was a member. Those who took part in the unveiling were William Ferguson, Anthony Alecca, Peter Sottile, John Misove and Ray Myer. Howard C. Shurter, director of the Ulster County Veterans Agency, who presided at the memorial service and introduced General Hasbrouck, was also a member of the 7th Armored Division.

Following the massing of the colors and the playing of the national anthem the invocation was by the Rev. John Drew.

Mayor Frederick H. Stang was presented and introduced Herman O. Dietz, father of Sgt. Dietz, and also Mrs. Harry Durling, sister of Sgt. Dietz. In presenting Mayor Stang to the assemblage, Mr. Shurter said, "I want you to hear from the man whose thought and action has made this memorial possible—in his annual message to the Common Council he proposed that this was a fitting and proper way for Kingston to honor Robert Dietz and all the veterans of Kingston who paid the supreme sacrifice in all our wars."

In dedicating the stadium to the memory of Sgt. Dietz General Hasbrouck said in part:

Hasbrouck Gives Address

General Hasbrouck said in part: "We are here today not only to do honor to the memory of all men and women of Kingston who have made the supreme sacrifice in war but also to pay a special tribute to a fellow Kingstonian who by has valor and self-sacrifice won a place amongst our national heroes.

"I refer to Staff Sergeant Robert H. Dietz, 7th Armored Division, to whom the Congressional Medal of Honor was awarded posthumously. The medal of honor is the highest military award for bravery that can be given any individual in the United States of America.

"It is only the bravest of the brave who are awarded the Medal of Honor," said General Hasbrouck.

Only 292 individuals in the entire army and air force won this award during World War 2 and Robert Dietz was one of those.

His official citation was read by General Hasbrouck. The citation reads:

DIETZ, ROBERT H.

Rank and Organization: Staff Sergeant, Company A, 38th Armored Infantry Battalion, 7th Armored Division.

Place and Date: Kirchain, Germany, 29 March 1945.

Entered Service at: Kingston, N. Y. Birth: Kingston, N. Y.

General Orders No. 119, 17 December 1945. Citation: He was a squad leader when the task force to which his unit was attached encountered resistance in its advance on Kirchain, Germany. Between the town's outlying building 300 yards distant and the stalled armored column were a mine field and two bridges defended by German rocket-launching teams and riflemen. From the town itself came heavy small-arms fire. Moving forward with his men to protect engineers while they removed the minefield and the demolition charges attached to the bridges, Sergeant Dietz came under intense fire. On his own initiative he advanced alone, scorning the bullets which struck all around him, until he was able to kill the bazooka team defending the first bridge. He continued ahead and had killed another bazooka team, bayonetted an enemy soldier armed with a panzerfaust and shot two Germans when he was knocked to the ground by the blast of another panzerfaust. He quickly recovered, killed the men who had fired at him and then jumped into waist-deep water under the second bridge to disconnect the demolition charges. His work was completed; but as he stood up to signal that the route was clear he was killed by another enemy volley from the left flank. Sergeant Dietz by his intrepidity and valiant effort on his self-imposed mission, single-handedly opened the road for the capture of Kirchain and left with his comrades an inspiring example of gallantry in the face of formidable odds.

"It was my privilege to command the 7th Armored Division and on the 29th of March 1945 I arrived on a hill overlooking the town of Kerchain. I did not see Bob Dietz as he calmly and efficiently went his way using his bayonet and rifle to dispose of eight of the enemy and cause others to run away, then just as calmly remove the demolition charges from the bridges."

"Hardly had I arrived at my vantage point than the stalled armored column started to move. I breathed a great sigh of relief for we were on an urgent mission, the capture of the great Eder-See Dam—Germany's largest dam—and our instructions were to seize it before the Germans could destroy it and flood the valley of the Eder River for miles to the east."

Dietz Bought Time

"Time was of the essence and Bob Dietz bought us time. He never asked the price. He knew we had to have it and he just waded in and bought it—with his bayonet, his rifle and his life."

What might have resulted had not the 7th Armored seized the dam before the Germans blew it never can be told, but General Hasbrouck said the First Army's advance would have been halted at least two days had the Eder valley been flooded, "and so it happened that the outstanding bravery of one man may well have had a profound effect on the fortunes of a whole Army."

Just as fellow Kingstonians had known Bob Dietz, as a rather quiet young man, modest and unassuming, "we of the 7th Armored Division have similar memories of him," said the speaker.

Would Ask for Others

"We know that, were it possible for him to observe these ceremonies here today, he would in all probability be somewhat embarrassed by the honor being done him. He would earnestly desire that equal honor be paid to all Kingstonians who lost their lives in battle.

"Kingston bears the distinction today of being the home of the oldest military organization of continuous existence in all of the United States. The Trainband of Wiltwyck and Esopus constituted in 1658 under the captainship of our founding father Thomas Chamber, is the direct ancestor in an unbroken line of our own Battery A, 156th Field Artillery Battalion now stationed at the Kingston National Guard Armory.

"The Battery A guidon is eligible to carry on its staff fifteen silver bands indicating participation in various campaigns of the Revolutionary War, Civil War, World War 1 and Work War 2.

"Kingstonians have fought and died before Quebec, at Saratoga, at Manassas, Antietam, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg; in the St. Mihiel salient and in the far reaches of the Pacific. Of recent years, Kingstonians breathed their last in the struggle for Heartbreak Ridge and Old Baldy in the far-off Korea. Were Bob Dietz here today, I know that he would be the first to agree that each of these men who died on these far-flung battlefields is entitled to the status of American hero.

To my mind, the honor which we seek to pay can best be expressed in two ways.

The first is quite simple—to remember. This, you are doing by these ceremonies here today.

To the second point, I attach a transcendent importance. I shall endeavor to express it in these words—We must stand united in the defense of our way of life.

Today our country is suffering from an "epidemic of vague fears about things which may never happen, and over which we have little near term control," General Hasbrouck stated, and while he agreed these dangers are very real in deep perspective, he said "a state of jitters will get us nowhere in warding them off. Fear paralyzes clear thinking and often makes it more difficult to take effective counter measures and often leads to hasty and "ill-considered action."

Our nation should take a determined stand and "it should be our determined task to build up defenses against an enemy that has the hydrogen bomb. We must be ever vigilant in rooting out Communist spies and traitors but it should be done in a manner that conforms with our traditions and laws and not in a way which causes us to present a sorry spectacle before the world. We must make it understood to the world that while we abhor war, we will not stand for aggression. We must clearly state our policies and back them up with firm decisions and actions."

In a final analysis, the destiny of a nation lies in the "composite character of its people" and it behooves every American to give his full support to a "constructive effort" for freedom, said General Hasbrouck.

In conclusion he said:

"To the father and sister of Robert Dietz, who are with us today, I bow in humble tribute. Men of the 7th Armored Division who are here today, as well as those who are scattered throughout our broad land join with the citizens of Kingston in this proud salute. We dedicate this stadium as a lasting monument to the spirit and deeds of Kingston's Congressional Medal of Honor Winner, Robert H. Dietz and to the memory of the men and women of Kingston, who made the supreme sacrifice in all of our victorious wars."

Presents General

In presenting General Hasbrouck, Mr. Shurter said in part: In 1945, during the titanic, bloody struggle of the final days of the war in Europe, when Bob Dietz made his heroic and final advance, his commanding general was a man who had earned commendation upon commendation for his leadership during our victorious advance against the enemy. His division, the 7th Armored Division, of which I am proud to say I was a member, established many records in offensive actions. It was admitted by the enemy, that General Hasbrouck's "Lucky Seventh" was one of the most feared in the allied forces. Trouble shooters they were called and trouble shooters they were...always being called to action where enemy opposition had stalled an advance or staged a successful counter attack. During the battle of the Bulge General Hasbrouck and his division were commended by Field Marshal Montgomery as having accomplished one of the greatest holding actions of World War Two in history. As one high ranking military man told me..."He (General Hasbrouck) is the greatest military figure to come out of Kingston and Ulster county from George Washington's time to the present."

Ever since the end of the war General Hasbrouck has been hoping and striving for just such a memorial as we have here today. He has made a special trip from Washington to dedicate this stadium in the name of one of his greatest soldiers, Bob Dietz and in the memory of all veterans who made the final great sacrifice in the name of Liberty. Ladies and gentlemen I proudly present Major General Robert Hasbrouck U. S. Army Ret.

The dedicatory prayer was by the Rev. Forrest Prindle, pastor of the Reformed Church of the Comforter.

Following the awarding of the Silver Star to Cpl. Norton, the benediction was pronounced by Rabbi H. Z. Rappaport, a volley was fired by the Marine Corps firing squad and taps was sounded, bringing the cermonies to a conclusion.

Youth Is Held On Assault Count

Ronald E. Jansen, 17, of 157 Hasbrouck avenue, was arraigned before Judge Raymond J. Mino in city court yesterday morning on a second degree assault charge and held for the grand jury.

Jansen was arrested shortly before midnight Sunday at his home by Officers Sheldon O'Rourke and Everett J. Emmick, who had been dispatched to the scene at the request of the family.

It was charged that when the officers arrived at the home young Jansen punched O'Rourke with his fist and kicked him in the stomach.

Gabriel Sottile, 21, of Ulster Park, who was arrested at 3:04 a. m. Sunday by Officers Slover and McCloskey charged with speeding on Albany avenue near Foxhall avenue, forfeited $20 bail when he failed to appear in court this morning.

Donald Dermody, 18, of 13 DuBois street, and Phillip Allen Haines, 17, of Connelly, were fined $15 each by Judge Mino this morning on speeding charges. They were arrested at 10:32 p. m. Sunday by Officers Emmick and O'Rourke charged with speeding 50 MPH on Broadway near O'Neil street.

Ring Champ Held After Man's Death

Albany, June 1 (AP)—A Golden Gloves boxing champ was free in $500 bail today pending grand jury action on a second-degree manslaughter charge stemming from the death of a 26-year-old man after a picnic fist fight.

Daniel J. Cira, 19, of Albany, winner of the 147-pound class title in an Adirondack AAU Golden Gloves tourney here last March, waived examination yesterday when arraigned before Peace Justice Harold W. White of Bethlehem.

State police said witnesses told them that Cira had punched Frank M. Drzewiecki of Albany at a high school picnic Saturday in nearby Thacher Park. Drzewiecki's head struck a car when he fell, and he was dead on arrival at a doctor's office in New Salem.

Witnesses reported, police said, that the older man had insulted a girl Cira had escorted to the picnic.

J. Gregory Nealon, an Albany county coroner, said the man had died from a brain injury.

Stadium Is

dium, General Hasbrouck also presented to Mr. and Mrs. George Norton, Sr., of 157 Hasbrouck avenue, a Silver Star which was awarded posthumously to Corporal Joseph Norton for gallantry in action near Sokkogea, Korea, on July 8, 1953. The award was accepted by the father in the presence of Capt. Wayne Reynolds.

The ceremonies at the stadium followed the parade from the high school to the stadium in which many local organizations took part. There were 11 divisions in the parade and it took nearly an hour for the parade to pass a given point. In line were 13 musician organizations.

Plaque Is Dedicated

Dedication of the plaque at the stadium in memory of Sgt. Dietz was done in the presence of local members of the Seventh Armored Division of which Sgt. Dietz was a member. Those who took part in the unveiling were William Ferguson, Anthony Alecca, Peter Sottile, John Misove and Ray Myer. Howard C. Shurter, director of the Ulster County Veterans Agency, who presided at the memorial service and introduced General Hasbrouck, was also a member of the 7th Armored Division.

Following the massing of the colors and the playing of the national anthem the invocation was by the Rev. John Drew.

Mayor Frederick H. Stang was presented and introduced Herman O. Dietz, father of Sgt. Dietz, and also Mrs. Harry Durling, sister of Sgt. Dietz. In presenting Mayor Stang to the assemblage, Mr. Shurter said, "I want you to hear from the man whose thought and action has made this memorial possible—in his annual message to the Common Council he proposed that this was a fitting and proper way for Kingston to honor Robert Dietz and all the veterans of Kingston who paid the supreme sacrifice in all our wars."

In dedicating the stadium to the memory of Sgt. Dietz General Hasbrouck said in part:

Hasbrouck Gives Address

General Hasbrouck said in part: "We are here today not only to do honor to the memory of all men and women of Kingston who have made the supreme sacrifice in war but also to pay a special tribute to a fellow Kingstonian who by has valor and self-sacrifice won a place amongst our national heroes.

"I refer to Staff Sergeant Robert H. Dietz, 7th Armored Division, to whom the Congressional Medal of Honor was awarded posthumously. The medal of honor is the highest military award for bravery that can be given any individual in the United States of America.

"It is only the bravest of the brave who are awarded the Medal of Honor," said General Hasbrouck.

Only 292 individuals in the entire army and air force won this award during World War 2 and Robert Dietz was one of those.

His official citation was read by General Hasbrouck. The citation reads:

DIETZ, ROBERT H.
Rank and Organization: Staff Sergeant, Company A, 38th Armored Infantry Battalion, 7th Armored Division.
Place and Date: Kirchain, Germany, 29 March 1945.
Entered Service at: Kingston, N. Y. Birth: Kingston, N. Y.

General Orders No. 119, 17 December 1945. Citation: He was a squad leader when the task force to which his unit was attached encountered resistance in its advance on Kirchain, Germany. Between the town's outlying building 300 yards distant and the stalled armored column were a mine field and two bridges defended by German rocket-launching teams and riflemen. From the town itself came heavy small-arms fire. Moving forward with his men to protect engineers while they removed the minefield and the demolition charges attached to the bridges, Sergeant Dietz came under intense fire. On his own initiative he advanced alone, scorning the bullets which struck all around him, until he was able to kill the bazooka team defending the first bridge. He continued ahead and had killed another bazooka team, bayonetted an enemy soldier armed with a panzerfaust and shot two Germans when he was knocked to the ground by the blast of another panzerfaust. He quickly recovered, killed the men who had fired at him and then jumped into waist-deep water under the second bridge to disconnect the demolition charges. His work was completed; but as he stood up to signal that the route was clear he was killed by another enemy volley from the left flank. Sergeant Dietz by his intrepidity and valiant effort on his self-imposed mission, single-handedly opened the road for the capture of Kirchain and left with his comrades an inspiring example of gallantry in the face of formidable odds.

"It was my privilege to command the 7th Armored Division and on the 29th of March 1945 I arrived on a hill overlooking the town of Kerchain. I did not see Bob Dietz as he calmly and efficiently went his way using his bayonet and rifle to dispose of eight of the enemy and cause others to run away, then just as calmly remove the demolition charges from the bridges."

"Hardly had I arrived at my vantage point than the stalled armored column started to move. I breathed a great sigh of relief for we were on an urgent mission, the capture of the great Eder-See Dam—Germany's largest dam—and our instructions were to seize it before the Germans could destroy it and flood the valley of the Eder River for miles to the east."

Dietz Bought Time

"Time was of the essence and Bob Dietz bought us time. He never asked the price. He knew we had to have it and he just waded in and bought it—with his bayonet, his rifle and his life."

What might have resulted had not the 7th Armored seized the dam before the Germans blew it never can be told, but General Hasbrouck said the First Army's advance would have been halted at least two days had the Eder valley been flooded, "and so it happened that the outstanding bravery of one man may well have had a profound effect on the fortunes of a whole Army."

Just as fellow Kingstonians had known Bob Dietz, as a rather quiet young man, modest and unassuming, "we of the 7th Armored Division have similar memories of him," said the speaker.

Would Ask for Others

"We know that, were it possible for him to observe these ceremonies here today, he would in all probability be somewhat embarrassed by the honor being done him. He would earnestly desire that equal honor be paid to all Kingstonians who lost their lives in battle.

"Kingston bears the distinction today of being the home of the oldest military organization of continuous existence in all of the United States. The Trainband of Wiltwyck and Esopus constituted in 1658 under the captainship of our founding father Thomas Chamber, is the direct ancestor in an unbroken line of our own Battery A, 156th Field Artillery Battalion now stationed at the Kingston National Guard Armory.

"The Battery A guidon is eligible to carry on its staff fifteen silver bands indicating participation in various campaigns of the Revolutionary War, Civil War, World War 1 and Work War 2.

"Kingstonians have fought and died before Quebec, at Saratoga, at Manassas, Antietam, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg; in the St. Mihiel salient and in the far reaches of the Pacific. Of recent years, Kingstonians breathed their last in the struggle for Heartbreak Ridge and Old Baldy in the far-off Korea. Were Bob Dietz here today, I know that he would be the first to agree that each of these men who died on these far-flung battlefields is entitled to the status of American hero.

To my mind, the honor which we seek to pay can best be expressed in two ways.

The first is quite simple—to remember. This, you are doing by these ceremonies here today.

To the second point, I attach a transcendent importance. I shall endeavor to express it in these words—We must stand united in the defense of our way of life.

Today our country is suffering from an "epidemic of vague fears about things which may never happen, and over which we have little near term control," General Hasbrouck stated, and while he agreed these dangers are very real in deep perspective, he said "a state of jitters will get us nowhere in warding them off. Fear paralyzes clear thinking and often makes it more difficult to take effective counter measures and often leads to hasty and "ill-considered action."

Our nation should take a determined stand and "it should be our determined task to build up defenses against an enemy that has the hydrogen bomb. We must be ever vigilant in rooting out Communist spies and traitors but it should be done in a manner that conforms with our traditions and laws and not in a way which causes us to present a sorry spectacle before the world. We must make it understood to the world that while we abhor war, we will not stand for aggression. We must clearly state our policies and back them up with firm decisions and actions."

In a final analysis, the destiny of a nation lies in the "composite character of its people" and it behooves every American to give his full support to a "constructive effort" for freedom, said General Hasbrouck.

In conclusion he said:

"To the father and sister of Robert Dietz, who are with us today, I bow in humble tribute. Men of the 7th Armored Division who are here today, as well as those who are scattered throughout our broad land join with the citizens of Kingston in this proud salute. We dedicate this stadium as a lasting monument to the spirit and deeds of Kingston's Congressional Medal of Honor Winner, Robert H. Dietz and to the memory of the men and women of Kingston, who made the supreme sacrifice in all of our victorious wars."

Presents General

In presenting General Hasbrouck, Mr. Shurter said in part: In 1945, during the titanic, bloody struggle of the final days of the war in Europe, when Bob Dietz made his heroic and final advance, his commanding general was a man who had earned commendation upon commendation for his leadership during our victorious advance against the enemy. His division, the 7th Armored Division, of which I am proud to say I was a member, established many records in offensive actions. It was admitted by the enemy, that General Hasbrouck's "Lucky Seventh" was one of the most feared in the allied forces. Trouble shooters they were called and trouble shooters they were...always being called to action where enemy opposition had stalled an advance or staged a successful counter attack. During the battle of the Bulge General Hasbrouck and his division were commended by Field Marshal Montgomery as having accomplished one of the greatest holding actions of World War Two in history. As one high ranking military man told me..."He (General Hasbrouck) is the greatest military figure to come out of Kingston and Ulster county from George Washington's time to the present."

Ever since the end of the war General Hasbrouck has been hoping and striving for just such a memorial as we have here today. He has made a special trip from Washington to dedicate this stadium in the name of one of his greatest soldiers, Bob Dietz and in the memory of all veterans who made the final great sacrifice in the name of Liberty. Ladies and gentlemen I proudly present Major General Robert Hasbrouck U. S. Army Ret.

The dedicatory prayer was by the Rev. Forrest Prindle, pastor of the Reformed Church of the Comforter.

Following the awarding of the Silver Star to Cpl. Norton, the benediction was pronounced by Rabbi H. Z. Rappaport, a volley was fired by the Marine Corps firing squad and taps was sounded, bringing the cermonies to a conclusion.

Youth Is Held On Assault Count

Ronald E. Jansen, 17, of 157 Hasbrouck avenue, was arraigned before Judge Raymond J. Mino in city court yesterday morning on a second degree assault charge and held for the grand jury.

Jansen was arrested shortly before midnight Sunday at his home by Officers Sheldon O'Rourke and Everett J. Emmick, who had been dispatched to the scene at the request of the family.

It was charged that when the officers arrived at the home young Jansen punched O'Rourke with his fist and kicked him in the stomach.

Gabriel Sottile, 21, of Ulster Park, who was arrested at 3:04 a. m. Sunday by Officers Slover and McCloskey charged with speeding on Albany avenue near Foxhall avenue, forfeited $20 bail when he failed to appear in court this morning.

Donald Dermody, 18, of 13 DuBois street, and Phillip Allen Haines, 17, of Connelly, were fined $15 each by Judge Mino this morning on speeding charges. They were arrested at 10:32 p. m. Sunday by Officers Emmick and O'Rourke charged with speeding 50 MPH on Broadway near O'Neil street.
